

I wish I could give you something more meaningful than words. I wish I could send you something worth holding in the palm of your hand, and holding dear with all your being. But for now, all I can do is write.

I don't have much to say here. I've said it before; if I started I could never stop. I simply wish you a happy fifth anniversary, and many more. This message is to our fifth anniversary, our six, seventh, and so on. This message is to serve as a reminder that I count down the hours till our wedding day anxiously.

To put it simply: this message is a reminder I love you.