√Personality∀

Blueblossom is a stubborn, prideful cat with intense beliefs. He's a skeptic at heart, and isn't afraid to express that, often to the point of upsetting the more religious cats in his colony. He can be hard to impress, which paradoxically often makes cats want to be the one who manages to do it. The one exception is his family, who he treats with considerably more gentleness than most.

Like his father before him, Blue is extremely loyal and holds strong family values. He feels very protective of his family, and has the tendency to be suspicious of cats outside of it. He believes very strongly in unconditional family love, but not so much in it existing elsewhere. Although he does clash with his family in some areas – where his father taught him that happiness is in giving, Blue is more hesitant, desiring to be selfish at times. He struggles to find the right balance between pleasing his family and staying true to himself and what he wants.

Blue can be quite competitive, always wanting to be the one to come out on top. Though he can be somewhat difficult to motivate into doing something he hasn't chosen for himself, that all flies out of the window when it's made into a challenge he can beat. He struggles to know when it's time to keep going and persevere and when it's time to cut his losses and quit; he hates quitting. Once he's dedicated himself to doing something, he will see it through no matter what.

Of all the things Blue struggles with, perhaps the biggest one is legacy. Due to his strikingly similar appearance to his late grandmother Wisteria, he's often compared to her, something that Blue doesn't know what to do with. He doesn't know how he can live up to someone that at this point has become more of an idea than a real cat. He hates being compared and speaks out strongly that he's his own cat. He much prefers the idea of being seen as an individual to the idea of being seen as part of a whole.

Blue wants to be independent, but in reality he relies a lot on his family. He's actually very social, easily becoming sad and listless if those needs aren't met. He likes to daydream about a world in which he could shed all of his responsibilities and internal conflicts and strike out on his own, but he could never truly achieve this. And really, a part of him is just too stubborn to admit that anything is wrong in the first place, or to run off from his problems.

For better or worse, Blue will always stay.

Early Life

Blueblossom was born in the Cavern Colony, alongside four siblings, Fairybell, Tigerlily, Jewelweed and Anemone. Their father, Rose, had them with the help of a surrogate, who Blueblossom only knew at the stages of life where she was too young to remember.

Blueblossom was born at the tail end of a kitten boom, and she had many similarly aged peers, though she distrusted most of them. Usually, she preferred to stick close to her father, auncle, grandparent, and siblings. From a young age, she felt slight pressure from her family to live up to her grandmother Wisteria's legacy, as out of the family, she looked the most like her.

When she and her siblings were still quite small, the Beach Colony approached the Cavern Colony for aid in an attack against the Flytrap Colony. Lupa refused, but an older molly named Kelp disobeyed orders and went anyway. It was a huge topic of conversation for weeks, and some cats thought Kelp would be exiled, but there was enough support for her actions to prevent something that drastic.

As more cats came and went from the colony, a notable new member was a tom named Horse, who Blue's father seemed to be getting suspiciously close with. She didn't like it. He hadn't proven himself trustworthy yet and Blue was still very wary around him.

Adulthood

As Blueblossom turned a year old, it was time for her to pick a rank. She decided to be a ranger, as did her siblings! There was much company to be had and she could never dream of not going where her family was going.

Blue saw as several young cats her age disappeared. Cody, Atlas, Lunar, Gypsum, Spade... so many cats were just gone. She was never close to any of them, but having them go missing was still a large shock, especially such a large group all at once.

Blue decided one day to go out looking for them. She went alone, and was planning on being back within a few days. She'd just caught herself a meal when she was ambushed by two hungry foxes. She fought them off, but was seriously injured.

Luckily for her, a seal point bicolour molly named Cyra saw her and stopped to help. Blue spent a great deal of time with Cyra while she was healing, becoming friends. Cyra was a trans molly, and the way she talked about gender had Blue wondering what she wanted. She'd felt the pressure to be Wisteria her whole life, so she'd never considered that maybe she wasn't a granddaughter after all, but a grandson.

Blue spent a couple months with Cyra healing up before he told her he had to go back and rejoin his family. She understood, but was unsure about following, so Blue gave her the directions in case she wanted to come back.

Upon his return, Blue came out to his family, and found out that Tigerlily had gone missing... because he was looking for Blue. Blue felt incredibly guilty about this, and he worried that his family might resent him for it, though he didn't have a concrete reason to feel that way as they all just seemed happy to have him back.
