Script:

(Narration)

Knowledge- the poison of man. Since the beginning of time it's been men who sought it out. But those who have discovered the truth of the world's secrets have found the revelations too much to bear.

But, I have found another path to furthering my knowledge. That is through the understanding of the eldritch.

[wind blowing sfx]

In such pursuits, I have sacrificed the body leaving it fragile and weak for this understanding. With the addition of this knowledge I have made my mind sharper and more versatile.

(...)

Whatever foe that is faced I will expel its strength or open them up for devastation. The eldritch powers can render the souls of even the most foul of beasts motionless. I do have to warn you the cost of calling the ever looming shadows closer is high.

(...)

Bringing back people from the slim edge of death. Reconstructing flesh and wounds that would kill in seconds back to full health. But it can play as a double edged sword as it can easily tear flesh apart or make them bleed from every orifice in their body.

(...)

Given the technique can be unpredictable you can't complain about its effectiveness. Which is why I accept the power for what it is, adventurer. Making a deal with the heart of darkness comes with such... extremes.

(...)

I hope you understand because this will help us win many fights, adventurer. Which is why you need to be comfortable when all seems bleak trust in the eldritch. Anyways get some sleep. I'm going to keep working on my rituals and curses for the raid tomorrow.

(...)

Good night adventurer. And let the power of the heart protect thee. <laugh>
