

With a partner (or in groups of three), discuss the following questions. Once you feel comfortable with the answers you've come up with, share your perspectives with the class on this doc. Be sure to use a different color font so that we can tell the groups apart.

1. What information should you include in an introduction?

background

The thesis statement, the background,

The purpose, background information. Main ideas, take a position. Hook thesis, hook

general idea of the solutions

The topic, background information, thesis statement

2. How should this information may be sequenced (ordered)?

1.hook, background information, take a position, thesis statement

1. hook, background information, take a position, thesis

The topic, background information, thesis statement

hook-background-purpose-thesis statement hook--background info-thesis-solutions

1.Hook, 2.Background information 3.Take a position 4.Thesis statement

3. What is the purpose of an introduction?

attract audiences

to give a quick preview of the paper to clarify author's idea, to provide a preview of the paper

To give a preview of the paper to audience

Briefly explain the purpose of the IRP(give a preview of this paper.)

give audiences an general idea of the paper

4. What are some features common to all introductions? Based on an analysis of audience and purpose, what are some ways that introductions can be different? How do you think the introduction to an argumentative or persuasive essay will differ from that of a research paper? he

All introduction has thesis statement

All the introduction paragraph include

All introductions have a clear idea.