INTRODUCTION

Welcome to the template of Salience Journal. In this section, the author(s) needs to clearly clarify and present the research background, problems, and goal(s). Please use subheadings instead of bullets, pointers, or numbering. The author(s) is also strongly suggested to avoid using pronouns such as I, we, our.

In this part, the author(s) should clearly describe the related previous studies as well. In doing so, Author(s) needs to mention literature review or theoretical basis in the article. Citation is required in this part. The in-text citations are adapted from APA style with some adjustments to suit the need of this journal. For examples, the author(s) may write: According to Hyland (2015)... or ... (Harrison et al., 2013). The author(s) may also write: Rafieyan et al. (2014) suggested...; or "...," said Arifin (2019:87) when the author(s) uses direct quotation. The author(s) can write ...stated in Mind⁺ (2011) if they cite a magazine article with unknown writer of the article. This journal suggests that author(s) use a computer application (such as Mendeley or Zotero) to manage the citations and references.

METHOD

In this section the author(s) should provide adequate and sufficient detail of research method. Author(s) must explain chronologically the study, including how to prepare the research materials, design, and research procedures. In addition, the author(s) needs to explain the method(s) used in the research.

FINDINGS AND DISCUSSION

This section contains the results of research and analysis done with an emphasis on the answer to the problems. The author(s) is recommended to discuss the results according to the findings. When the author(s) needs to present tables or figures:

Table 1: Frequency Distribution
