

The Sun and The Moon

by Lisa Yang

One summertime, Sun worked hard to light up the day while Moon was sleeping. Moon did not come out at night, so Sun worked harder to light up the day longer. Sun talked to Moon.

“Knock knock knock.”

Sun said, “Moon, I need you to come out.” “Okay!” Moon answered. But he didn't open the door. Sun waited for so long until he got angry. Sun did not leave until Moon came out to shine at night. Moon felt that he could not shine.

Moon asked help from Sun, “Sun, please help me to shine again.”

Sun answered, “Okay, Moon. I will help you if you promise not to be lazy again.”

Moon said, “Sorry, Sun. I promise not to be lazy again.” The following day, Sun helped Moon to shine again.

Moral: Don't be lazy.