BACKGROUND

The Introduction consists of research background supported by up-to-date data, constructed problem, and research objectives. The Introduction section is presented in an integrated manner in several paragraphs which builds the 15-20% of the article.

METHOD

The Method section describes about research method, samples/population of samples, variables, time and place, data collection techniques, and data analysis. This section builds 15-20% of articles.

A complete research plan is described clearly in this section; which includes the profile and the role of each researcher, and how the research is conducted.

The research ethics permit number and the Ethics Committee Approval are also written in this section.

RESULT

This section explains the results of the research related to the objectives. The results of the research can be in the form of tables, diagrams, pictures, words, etc.

DISCUSSION

The Discussion part is a complete section that contains the explanation of the results related to the objectives. Every result is discussed clearly in a straightforward manner. This section contains the interpretation of research results which covers facts, theories, and opinions. The Result and Discussion sections build 50-60% of the article.

CONCLUSION

This section concludes research results by addressing the problems and objectives, written in the form of conclusion of the Discussion section, implication of the results, and recommendation from the researchers. This section builds maximum 5% of the article.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Acknowledgment can be given to contributors (Institutional or individual) without writing down the academic title.

REFERENCES

The Reference section consists of all references used to support the article. Referred sources should be in form of literatures published in the last 10 years (for journals), primary sources (articles from journals, or scientific reports (thesis, dissertation).

The number of references used in the form of journals should be minimum of 10 journals. The total number of references used in the form of various sources minimum 15 references. The Reference section should be written in an alphabetical and chronological order. The sample on how to write the Reference section is available at the end of this guideline. The Reference section is written is Harvard style automatically using a software for example using Endnote, Mendeley, Zotero, RefWorks atau Colwiz. The software can be downloaded from the link available on this Journal website or using other similar softwares.
