

BOOKS, BOOKS AND MORE BOOKS

Stimulating children's block work with a selection of children's picture books is an essential component to having a vibrant block area in the classroom. Watching children carefully and listening to what they are talking about/ interested in is the best way to know what books will further inspire them in their work with materials.

Having a rotating selection of both fiction and non-fiction books is important and will feed children with a primary experience of "research": where do I go to find out more information about how things work and to answer my questions?

Here are just a few picture book suggestions. I know your children will help to prime the pump for books that will work best in your classrooms.:
