

Potter Parody Preview

Added by A. Weatherwax on November 15, 2019.

Saved under All Posts, Archives, Arts and Entertainment, Photo Galleries, Theater

Tags: Drama, Harry Potter, Puffs

Talawanda High School's drama program hits the funny bone again and this time it's with "Puffs: The Play," written by Matt Cox and directed by Catherine Hudson. Fans of Harry Potter will recognize some favorite characters and plot points in the parody that tells the story of the "Puffs" who learn that it's okay to be sorted into the house of loyal outcasts in a familiar wizarding school.

Tickets are on sale now and the play runs Nov. 14 through Nov. 16, 2019 at 7 p.m. in the THS Performing Arts Center. Hudson makes use of a black-box style theater that puts the audience on the stage along with the play's set. You'll enter the theater through the choir room. Just be sure to keep your cell phone in your pocket during the show because the performers are not afraid to call you out and make you a part of the show. In fact, this photographer was called out by the Dark Lord himself for taking these photos.

