INTRODUCTION (Capital letter, Times New Roman 12 pt, Bold, Indent Left)

The introduction provides the research background, the formulation of the problem stems from an imbalance between "das sein" (empirical conditions/reality level) and "das sollen" (ideal conditions/theoretical level). It is containing the relevant previous research to show the analysis gap and the author's position in this study, novelty contributions. Point out the research questions, the author's arguments, and the purpose of writing the article. (12 pt)

There are no subsections in this introduction.

ANALYSIS FRAMEWORK (Capital letter, Times New Roman 12 pt, Bold, Indent Left)

The analytical framework contains the theories, concepts, approaches or perspectives/paradigms used to analyze the cases or topics of study. The naming of the analytical framework can be adjusted or replaced by using a name/term that reflects the conceptual or theoretical framework used (example: Liberalism in Interdependence Relations). (12 pt)

RESEARCH METHOD (Capital letter, Times New Roman 12 pt, Bold, Indent Left)

The research method contains the method used in this study. The author(s) has to explain the details of research procedures; sources of data; the techniques of data collection; and data analysis. (12 pt)

RESULTS AND DISCUSSIONS (Capital letter, Times New Roman 12 pt, Bold, Indent Left)

The results and discussions show the results of the study and deep analysis or discussion which answer the research questions. Also, the author(s) must discuss the findings by strengthening the reason with supporting details taken from any references such as scientific journal, book, and other reliable sources. (12 pt).

In this section the author can add separate sections (subsections and sub-sections), figures and tables.

CONCLUSION (Capital letter, Times New Roman 12 pt, Bold, Indent Left)

The conclusion section does not contain repetition or excerpts from the discussion section. It contains the concluding paragraph and provides the implication, limitation, and suggestion for further study. (12 pt)

REFERENCES (Capital letter, 12pt, Bold, Indent Left)

The References must consist of all sources cited in the article. All the sources should be under 10 years from its publication unless historical study. Sixty per cent (60%) of the references should be taken from the journal article. The reference uses the Mendeley reference management system, Zotero, and Endnote. (12 pt)
