

Envolvement is a concept that transcends the ordinary understanding of love.

Primavera De Filippi, Apolinário Passos

Envolvement It is about being deeply engaged, wrapped in an experience, and growing through that connection. It's a journey, a process, a state of being that transcends boundaries and encourages growth and transformation.

Envolvement is a blend of 'involve', 'envelop', and 'evolve':

INVOLVE

The concept of 'involve' is a key component of 'envolvement'. To involve is to actively participate or engage in something. It's about being a part of the process, not just observing from the sidelines. It's about taking action, making choices, and having a direct impact on the outcome.

In the context of envolvement, 'involve' takes on a deeper meaning. It's not just about being a part of something, but about being deeply connected to it. It's about fully immersing yourself in an experience or relationship, allowing it to envelop you, and growing through that connection.

ENVELOP

'Envelop' signifies being completely wrapped or covered by something. It's about immersion, about being surrounded by an experience or relationship to the point where you become a part of it. It's including someone in your care circle, caring about their happiness and well being. Envolvement asks us not only to be involved, but to let ourselves be enveloped by our experiences and relationships. It's about letting these connections permeate our being, allowing them to become part of us.

EVOLVE

The concept of 'evolve' is the transformative heartbeat of envolvement. To evolve is to change, adapt, and grow. It's about learning from our experiences and relationships, and using that knowledge to become a better, more enlightened version of ourselves.

In the dance of envolvement, 'evolve' is the crescendo. It's the culmination of being involved and enveloped. It's the transformative power that comes from deep, immersive engagement. It's the growth and change that comes from being fully present and connected in our relationships and experiences. Thus, 'evolve' is the essence of involvement.

INVOLVEMENT vs ROMANTIC LOVE

Envolvement and romantic love, while intertwined, are distinct in their essence. Romantic love is a specific type of connection, often marked by passion, desire, obsession, possessiveness and a deep emotional bond between individuals. It is a powerful force, but it can also be limiting, as it often is bound by societal expectations and norms.

Envolvement, on the other hand, transcends these limitations. It is a broader concept that encompasses all forms of connection, not just the romantic. Envolvement is about being deeply engaged and immersed in an experience or relationship, but it also includes the transformative element of evolution.

Regarding the limitations of romantic love that envolvement doesn't suffer from, here are a few:

1. Exclusivity: romantic love often focuses on hierarchical relationships, potentially limiting the scope of other connections. Envolvement, on the other hand, encourages a broader perspective, embracing dynamic forms of connections.
2. Idealization: Romantic love can sometimes lead to idealization, where individuals may project unrealistic expectations onto their partners. Envolvement encourages a more holistic and realistic approach to relationships, promoting acceptance and growth.
3. Dependency: Romantic love can sometimes foster dependency or a love competition, which can cause imbalances in the relationship. Envolvement provides a symbiotic connection where parties are giving

AGAINST ROMANTIC LOVE:

Envolvement provides several benefits that go beyond the scope of romantic love:

1. Inclusive: Envolvement includes all forms of connections, not just romantic ones. This includes friendships, familial bonds, and even connections with nature and the universe. It's a more holistic approach to relationships.
2. Evolutionary: Envolvement emphasizes growth and transformation. It encourages individuals to learn from their experiences and evolve into better versions of themselves.
3. Immersive: Envolvement promotes deep engagement and immersion in experiences and relationships. It encourages individuals to be fully present and involved, leading to richer and
4. Transcendent: Envolvement transcends societal norms and expectations that often limit romantic love. It's about authentic connections that aren't bound by labels or predefined roles.
5. Dynamic: Envolvement acknowledges the ever-changing nature of relationships and experiences. It's not about reaching a static end goal, but about enjoying the journey and adapting to changes along the way.
