Joomla! Code of Conduct

This document outlines the Code of Conduct for all who volunteer their services to the Joomla® Project. It covers what is expected of you as a member of the Joomla community and what you can expect of other community members in all interactions and communications (social media, forum, mailing list, Wiki, website, GitHub, IRC channel, JUG meeting, event, public meeting, private correspondence, etc.).

Be Considerate

Be kind, caring and considerate with your fellow community members. Keep in mind that we are an international community, with representation from many different cultures and languages. It is easy to misunderstand or misinterpret people – especially when communicating via online systems. At all times, err on the side of caution.

Be Respectful

Treat one another, and members of the community, with respect – as you yourself would like to be treated. Every member of the community is valued for their contribution to the community. Members of the Joomla community will be respectful when dealing with other volunteers as well as with people from outside projects or initiatives, and within the wider population.

Be Responsible

Take responsibility for your words, actions and commitments.

Be Collaborative

Joomla is free software and our project is centered around collaboration and working together. Collaboration helps to reduce duplication of work, encourages the sharing of knowledge and resources, and improves the quality of our communication and of our code.

Be Honest

Be honest and realistic, and don't commit to something you can't follow through on.

Conflict Resolution Team

The mission of the Conflict Resolution Team (CRT) is to uphold the Joomla Code of Conduct in order to maintain a friendly and welcoming community for the Joomla project.

Contact

Please use this Incident Report form here. The CRT will review the issue and evaluate the potential impact on all the individuals involved and the community as a whole. In all cases, we first encourage the parties to resolve it together, with mediation if required. Once evaluated, the CRT will respond as a group on next steps.
