Reflections on the Research Process

Reflecting on your research process will help you think about what you did well and areas for future growth. It will also give feedback to your teacher about ways the research lessons and assignments could be improved. Please take some time to think about and respond to the following questions:

- Was my project/presentation as effective as I could make it?
- How can I use the feedback I received to make my next project better?
- What parts of the research process did I do well?
 - Why?
- Which parts of the research were difficult?
 - Why?
- What parts of the research process can I improve on next time?
 - How?
- Feedback for the teacher: Are there any ways the assignment and lessons on research could be improved?
 - If yes, please list suggestions.
