

The Jumbo Type of Luxury: A Review of Patek Philippe Aquanaut 5167R

Switzerland is renowned worldwide for four things: panoramic scenery, exquisite chocolates, illustrious athletes like Roger Federer, and iconic luxury watches. Patek Philippe is amongst the country's widely celebrated names. And whether you're a collector or an enthusiast, the Aquanaut 5167R is one of its sublime creations that will up your style game.

Making this model extra special is its iconic colour combination—elegant rose gold and a delectable chocolatey hue and texture. It's tempting and captivating, almost as if it has been freshly unwrapped from its gold foil. Ah, we also can't get enough of it here at Time 4 Diamonds!

Want to know more? Then let's dive into it.

A Little Bit of History

The first-ever Patek Philippe Aquanaut for sale was unveiled in 1997 as a revamp for the Nautilus. This model comes in numerous versions, including chronos and various metal selections. However, it's not surprising that the Jumbo is the grandest model of all. The 5167 was the replacement for the 5065 as the biggest in the collection. Aiming to honour its decade-long success story, the company launched the strap version in rose gold and the dial in rich chocolate. The extra-large 5167R was also subtly polished in 2007. Given that the Jumbo Aquanaut exudes a vibe of casual elegance combined with powerful performance and stunning design, it is the leading choice of men as their luxury dress sports watch.

The Creative Design

The Aquanaut is a descendant of the original Nautilus, which launched in 1976 and was designed by Gerald Genta. He claims to have come up with the watch's design and its iconic porthole dial on a serviette while listening to the executives of Patek Philippe during a Baselworld launch. After the meal, he showed them his sketch. The executives were so stunned and impressed that it went straight into production unaltered.

Size wise, a new or used Patek Philippe Aquanaut 5167R is described as a Jumbo. Surprisingly, though, it's just a modest 40mm. But for us, it's not a big deal, as every part of it can be summed up into one word—perfection. The brown 'Decor Brun' tropical Dial is delicately outlined with luminescent hour/minute hands and markers. These are complemented by 18ct rose gold Arabic numeral markers on the inner dial, a conventional date display at 3 o'clock, and white sweep seconds hand.

Another thing we fancy about the Patek Philippe Aquanaut 5167R for sale is that it doesn't have any boring elements to it. Turn it over, and there's a see-through window on the caseback through which you can view the Calibre 324 S C automatic movement. This comes with a 45-hour power reserve and beats at a slow rate of 21,600.

The Construction

The advanced hypoallergenic composite 'Tropical' strap perfectly echoes the dial's raised 'chocolate bar' surface. The strap also has a composite material, making it resistant to bacterial growth, UV deterioration, and saltwater immersion. What's more, it features a comfy custom fit and is fitted into the butterfly-style folding clasp. Every detail is crafted with meticulous refinement.
