Personality

Around his peer group, Peregrine is a confident, swaggering tom with incredible natural charisma, and is often the ringleader of all the big trouble making schemes. He can be a bit of a bully, sometimes, especially when it comes to "chickens" (known to the layman as cats who won't go along with their schemes). On top of all that, they're quite the wily little bugger, making it difficult for anyone to actually catch him red-handed. They're secretly very insecure and act that way as a manner of masking his lack of self-love, stemming from the obvious tension between his parents at an early age. He distrusts authority figures and doesn't tend to open up very much to anyone he sees that way.

History

Early Life

Songbird was born to Hummingbird and Rainy after a particularly rough breakup for her mother. Though she was still young, she could still tell that something was up between her parents. They weren't together anymore, which made sense with all she had observed. There was clearly some bitterness there.

It wasn't long into little Songbird's life before the Clover Colony saw a major change in leadership. Olive stepped down, leaving Raspberry in the role of leader, with Honey, Stormy and Trout as her successors. Songbird didn't really care, she just wanted to roughhouse and have fun.

That wasn't gonna last. The Clover Colony soon allied with the Web Colony, warring against the Fire Colony, but Songbird and her siblings were far too young to participate. She wanted to, though.

Songbird felt a growing discomfort with being referred to as a she, though she didn't voice these thoughts. It'd be embarrassing if she were wrong, and she didn't want to deal with all that hassle. Sure, it seemed somewhat odd to refer to her entire gender identity as a "hassle" but that was how she thought of it. She just didn't want to bother.

When she reached six months, Clover Colony was called to Web Colony's aid. When Peregrine heard her father was going, she begged to go too, even if she had a very strained relationship with him, but she was told no.

Rainy never came back, and Clover Colony subsequently broke off the alliance.

Songbird blamed herself for it. If she had gone, maybe she could have saved him. She pushed her feelings about her gender down even further, just not wanting to talk about it.

Some time afterwards, Spider, the Web Colony's overlord, was kicked out of his colony and came to Clover Colony for shelter. Songbird didn't pay it much mind.

No, what was on her mind was the approaching renaming ceremony. She hadn't thought about it much before, but she wanted to take this opportunity to find a name that really fit her. And... maybe it was time to address the gender elephant in the room. The renaming ceremony would be a perfect time to come out.

So, that's exactly what happened. Songbird became Peregrine, and came out as a demiboy to the colony. He received a torrent of support, including from his newly renamed siblings; Chirp became Corvid, Melody became Tsunami and Rhythm became Orion. Whistle was the only one who didn't change his name. What was he, a coward?

Adulthood

Peregrine was happier now that he could be his authentic self. But of course the good times couldn't last, because not long after, Benny, one of the cats Peregrine had grown up with, passed. It made even the news of the Web Colony disbanding seem dull and empty. Five ancient Web cats joined the Clover Colony; Jessamine, Tansy, Dusty, Mac and Flutter, Peregrine wasn't too sure what to make of them just yet.
