There is a lot of energy being spent on rethinking homework—its purpose and usefulness. In the meantime, most of our kids still have homework and it can be a source of stress on the family. There are some things that parents can do to help reduce this stress. Join us for a discussion on how to help your student manage their homework. We will explore how to create a productive study environment at home and share effective time management strategies.

Lisa Miller is Co-Director of Classroom Matters, a support and advocacy center for students in grades K-12, located in Berkeley, CA. Lisa has over 13 years of experience in staff training, curriculum development and public speaking. Before coming to Classroom Matters in 2000, Lisa worked at Berkeley High School as a French and English teacher. classroommatters.com

POISE (Parents of Orinda Individuals in Special Education) and SPSK (Special Parents, Special Kids) in Lafayette are resource groups for families that have children who qualify for special education services in Orinda and Lafayette.
