Abstract

An abstract is a brief, comprehensive summary of the contents of the article; it allows readers to survey the contents of an article quickly and, like a title, it enables persons interested in the document to retrieve it from abstracting and indexing databases. Most scholarly journals require an abstract. Consult the instructions to authors or web page of the journal to which you plan to submit your article for any journal-specific instructions (maximum 250 words)

1. Introducation

1.1 Introduce the Problem

The body of a manuscript opens with an introduction that presents the specific problem under study and describes the research strategy. Because the introduction is clearly identified by its position in the manuscript, it does not carry a heading labeling it the introduction.

2. Literature Review

- Include the underpinning theories and theoretical framework (if any)
- Expalin the key terms in your study
- Report the findings of previous studies
- Add your voice to wherever you think is needed

3. Method

The Method section describes in detail how the study was conducted, including conceptual and operational definitions of the variables used in the study, Different types of studies will rely on different methodologies.

4. Results and Discussion

In the Results section, summarize the collected data and the analysis performed on those data relevant to the discourse that is to follow. Report the data in sufficient detail to justify your conclusions. Mention all relevant results, including those that run counter to expectation; be sure to include small effect sizes (or statistically nonsignificant fmdmgs) when theory predicts large (or statistically significant) ones. Do not hide uncomfortable results by omission.

5. Conclusuion

This section can conclude the study, recapitulate the main findings, describe the implications of the results, and make some suggestions and recommendation.
