After the candidate has introduced themselves, there will be a maximum of 5 minutes of open floor where the audience can ask questions to the candidate. This process will be repeated for each candidate. After all candidates have been questioned separately, then there is a maximum of 5 minutes discussion about all candidates.

If a candidate runs for more than 1 position then the candidate will not repeat their introduction. Only a question round will be held if the members express this need.

Voting will be done digitally through mentimeter. If there are any technical issues, the voting will be done on paper. In this case, the adjusters will hand out voting slips for each election, where you will write the name of the candidate you vote for. The adjusters will collect the voting slips and count. Once all the votes have been counted, first the results are announced to the meeting and then the candidates are informed about the results outside the room. Then, the candidates will come back into the room (if they feel comfortable) and are congratulated.

To be elected the candidate must have an absolute majority. This means that a candidate requires more than half of the casted and valid votes. If no candidate has achieved the required majority, a new round of voting is held between all candidates except the candidate who received the fewest votes in the previous round. If there is only two possible candidates left, a new round of voting is held where blank/abstain votes will not be counted.
