

“LIFE IN THE OFFICE” 2 MIN

[Serene office landscape, nature documentary music playing]

VO: Welcome to the world of the Rocket team member, a species driven by a set of philosophies which influence their day to day activities.

[cut to shots of desks]

VO: The desk. A temporary spot for the team member. Notice the organization and strategic placement of motivational décor that mentally fuels them for the day ahead. This species is known for its diversity, each team member collects different objects for inspiration and motivation.

[cut to shot of empty desk]

VO: While some don't decorate at all. Look! The team members begin to arrive for the day.

[cut to shot of team members entering the office and unload their belongings at their desks]

[cut to close up of the coffee machine. Team members chat around the machine]

VO: Behold the coffee maker. The watering hole for the team members to engage in the exchanging of tales and impending deadlines. Uh-oh, what's this? It appears this particular team member's favorite flavor of coffee is out. Let's observe their next move.

[The team member picks a new flavor of coffee instead of their usual and begins to brew a cup]

VO: Magnificent. This is a natural cycle in the workplace and adaptation is an important skill for the team member if they wish to thrive in the office environment. We'll be back for more adventures of the Rocket team members.

“LIFE IN THE OFFICE II” 2 MIN

[Serene office landscape, nature documentary music playing]

VO: Welcome back. Now observe the mid-day ritual: Lunch. Here the team members are divided into two groups. The first participate in a dance of microwave diplomacy in the communal kitchen. These team members bring their own sustenance for the day. However, it can end in either culinary conquests or microwave mishaps. Others go on the hunt for food outside the office where they're forced to challenge other office workers to be fed.

[cut to team members approaching the printer. There are hunt/fight vibes to the scene]

VO: In the wild, technological challenges naturally arise. The printer. A formidable adversary of the team members. Their relationship is a delicate one, capable of inducing stress and frustration at a moment's notice. Watch as the team member carefully approaches.

[Team member approaches like pouncing on prey. They are determined to win the ensuing battle, but the printer begins jamming/malfunctioning]

VO: Oh, the printer senses the importance and timeliness of the documents the team member is trying to get. Who will win?

[Music swells the team member fixes the jam and the printer begins working again]

VO: And just like that the printer is subdued. The team member collects their documents and returns triumphantly to their desk.

[cut to shot of team member at their desk]

VO: Although the team member spends time socializing and moving about the floor, most of their time is spent here at the desk with their trusted companion; the glowing screen. Here, they spend hours deciphering emails, crafting messages, and engaging in the ancient practice of multitasking. See how they furrow their brow in concentration.

[cut to the end of the day]

VO: As the day draws to a close, we witness the migration of the team member to the exit, seeking refuge from the fluorescent lights until tomorrow.
