Strengths:

Highly skilled interior scorer with a blend of strength, touch, and mobility. Advanced ball-handling for his size creates consistent mismatches, while passing vision out of short rolls and transition adds playmaking upside. Finishes efficiently through contact and thrives as a dynamic option in two-man actions.

Weaknesses:

Interior defense remains inconsistent, vulnerable to both stronger post players and quicker opponents. Perimeter shooting (20% from three) is still developing, though free-throw efficiency (76.6%) suggests growth potential. Needs refinement as a positional defender to offset limited rim protection.

Outlook:

Projects as a versatile frontcourt scorer and playmaker with offensive upside reminiscent of Alperen Sengun. If shooting and defensive positioning continue to improve, Queen has the tools to become a long-term starter in modern NBA lineups.
