

Module 3, Journal 1 (Reflective)

This week, I finished up my first ten hours of community service and/or internship time. I went to my mentor's office and spoke about how my project was going, and what the next move was for my internship.

Additionally, I also spoke with my community service coordinator, who informed me that I would need to speak with a higher administrator to really kick my project into place. I will be conducting a meeting with my high school principal, Mr. Palmieri, later this week, and will be talking to Mrs. Jamerson, who is an IT and computer science teacher. With Mr. Palmieri, I will discuss privacy concerns and administrative concerns that could affect my project, and what the main game plan has been changed to. I plan to have this second meeting after I speak with Mrs. Jamerson about my community service project, where I plan to create a hotline, detailed Google Form, or a simple app to help those in a mental crisis, or have violent tendencies.

Other than the main points of last week regarding the project, I will be working on my research paper for the remainder of the week along with the beginning of next week and complete it by the due date of November 9th. This has been difficult, as I have missed multiple days of school due to illness and have had a late start on my paper. This will not stop me though, as I will finish my background and introductory paragraph by the end of the school week, and work on the bodies over the weekend.

(Mrs. Reynolds and I at our meeting last week)

