The Dreyfus Affair

Alfred Dreyfus – have you heard the name? He inadvertently became a catalyst for the State of Israel’s very existence. In the late 1890’s, a Jewish Frenchman named Alfred Dreyfus was wrongly accused of treason. A young Theodore Herzl was a journalist at his trial, and after witnessing this open act of anti-Semitism, concluded that the Jews needed a place of their own in order to permanently escape anti-Semitism. He realized that if the enlightened and emancipated France failed to protect an assimilated and loyal Jewish officer, the rest of Europe would be no different; the Jews needed to leave. Herzl intensified his Zionist efforts, and 50 years after the Dreyfus Affair, the State of Israel was born.

Discussion Questions

1. From the Dreyfus Affair, it is noted that the facts of Dreyfus's guilt or innocence is less relevant than the hostile atmosphere that the trial created in which the French country was split and people were even chanting, “Death to the Jews.” From a historical lens and from the perspective of the history of Zionism, why do you think the reaction is more important than the facts of the case itself?

2. There is debate surrounding how much the Dreyfus Affair impacted Herzl and early Zionism. After watching this video and this one, what is your take?

3. Eventually, Dreyfus was pardoned and reinstated in the French military with high honors. To what extent does this rectify what had previously been done to him?
Learning Activities

1. Does the Dreyfus Affair sound to you like something that could only take place at a certain time and place in history or something that could happen today? Discuss.

2. Read the following article with your students and discuss the relevance of the Dreyfus Affair to modern times using the following questions:
   - Is the situation for Jews in France similar to the situation for French Jews during the time of Dreyfus?
   - Do recent events in France mean that anti-Semitism is reaching the end of a long slumber or are there different factors at work here?
   - What can we learn from the Dreyfus Affair to prevent future similar incidents from taking place in the future?

Reflection Questions

1. As nationalism swept through Europe, Jews had to ask themselves if they should remain loyal to their empires and become nationalists of those empires or if they should develop their own collective identity. If you could put yourself back into the 19th century, what would you choose? Does it have to be one or the other?

2. The French Revolution gave the Jewish people rights as individuals, but not as a people. Clermont-Tonnerre declared, “To the Jews as individuals—everything; as a nation—nothing.” Anita Shapira notes in Israel: A History, “A paradox was created whereby in an era of increasing secularization, the Jews’ self-definition began to lean heavily on religion: Germans of the Jewish faith, French people of the Jewish faith, and so forth.” For the first time, Jews felt a distinction between Jews as a people and as a religion. In what ways do you see Judaism as a religion, a nationality or a culture?

3. Put yourself in Herzl’s shoes. How would you feel if you watched such injustice take place? What would you write in your journal or diary?

4. Herzl first believed that the answer to anti-Semitism was for Jews to assimilate and to convert to Christianity; he then changed his mind and saw the solution in establishing a Jewish State. Looking back on it, it’s easy to judge Herzl negatively for his initial solution of conversion. What can this tell us about the context in which he lived in, that his only solutions were either developing a Jewish state or converting?

5. Many consider Emile Zola a hero in this story. What makes a hero?
