

Connecting to the Campus Network

The campus network is used by students, faculty and staff. You connect to the network through a wired connection or a VPN connection. This article explains how to connect to the Campus Network while on campus.

All computers located in labs on campus are connected to the campus network. You can access the network by logging onto the computer with your network username and password. Staff members should have access to the internet in their work space by connecting the Ethernet cord to their computer and to the internet port in their office. If you are having troubles connecting to the internet, please reboot your machine and ensure your computer is plugged into the network.
