

The Source Report: Synthesizing Sources

Six sources required, just like the Annotated Bibliography (due on 11/15)

You'll need: a minimum of one academic (peer-reviewed journal) source, at least three "artifacts" (examples of the narrative you're exploring), and one (maximum of two) sources from your Narrative Medicine reading list. You can use this report as the basis for the annotated bibliography assignment due on 11/27.

Name:
Research Question(s):

Charts are useful for familiarizing yourself with sources, comparing and connecting them, and organizing information before you start wiring your paper. This chart can become the basis for your annotated bibliography and can help you start outlining the "what I learned" section of the research project.

Full MLA Bibliography Citation:
How does this text extend/support/contradict the theme you're exploring from the NM course texts)?	What is the function of this text in your research? Is it an example of what you are asserting, does it support your argument (provide evidence), is it an opposing viewpoint, etc.	Connect this text to at least one other text on your chart. (There will be synthesis of texts needed in the formal writeup of your topic. Connecting sources here should help with that.)

--	--	--

Full Citation:

--	--	--

Full Citation:

--	--	--

Full Citation:

--	--	--

Full Citation:

--	--	--

Full Citation:

--	--	--

Full Citation:

How does this text extend/support/contradict the theme you're exploring from the NM course texts)?	What is the function of this text in your research? Is it an example of what you are asserting, does it support your argument (provide evidence), is it an opposing viewpoint, etc.	Connect this text to at least one other text on your chart. (There will be synthesis of texts needed in the formal writeup of your topic. Connecting sources here should help with that.)
Full Citation:
Full Citation:

--	--	--

Full Citation:

--	--	--

Full Citation:

--	--	--

Full Citation:

--	--	--