Abstract

The abstract should be written in English and Indonesian. It should be clear, concise, and descriptive. This section should briefly outline the problem background, objectives, methodology, and a summary of the research findings. Ensure precise terminology is used (for example, use the term 'local community' as a standard for referring to entities at a basic level). The abstract should be 150-250 words in one complete paragraph.

Keywords: concept 1; concept 2; concept 3 (3-5 keywords)

Introduction

The introduction includes the problem background, a review of previous literature (the state of the art) as a basis for stating scientific novelty, and the research objectives. Describe the problem specifically and avoid overly broad generalisations. Use Times New Roman, size 11, 1.15 spacing, and justified text.

Materials and Methods

This section describes the research type, approach, location, data collection techniques, and data analysis procedures. If the research was conducted in a specific area, justify the location selection. If qualitative data analysis utilised software, specify the version used and briefly describe the coding, matrix formation, or co-occurrence modelling steps used.

Results

Present the analysis results systematically without directly mixing them with in-depth theoretical interpretations. Present empirical data obtained from the field. If the manuscript includes model visualisations from qualitative analysis tools, you must explain their hierarchy descriptively—clearly explain which are the main themes (e.g., Local Knowledge and Adaptation) and which are sub-codes.

Table and Figure Terms:

1. A maximum of 8 images per manuscript is recommended to ensure the article remains efficient and easy to understand.
2. Table titles should be placed above the table, while figure titles should be placed below the figure.

Discussion

The discussion should connect the field findings outlined in the Results section to relevant sociological concepts or theories. The discussion should focus on the research subject or unit of analysis (e.g., if the study is about agriculture, ensure the manuscript focuses on workers in the agricultural sector, not other irrelevant entities/sectors).

Conclusion

The conclusion is not simply an abstract summary, but rather a comprehensive synthesis of the results and discussion that directly answers the research question or achieves the research objectives. Avoid using bullet points or numbering in this section. Write it as a complete paragraph.

Research Limitations

Describe the limitations that the researcher was aware of during the process of compiling this study, both from a methodological aspect, participant availability, and data coverage.

Research Recommendations

Provide concrete and targeted recommendations for further research that is relevant to the topic or locus of study based on the findings and limitations of this research.

Acknowledgements

The author thanks those who contributed to completing the research process and publishing this work.

Author's Contribution

The authors declare their contributions to the research and the manuscript. For example, MCBU: wrote the main text of the manuscript, prepared the figures, and reviewed the manuscript. ARU: Data curation, resources, writing – review & editing. VUT: Writing – review & editing.

Conflict of Interest

The authors declare that this research was conducted in the absence of any commercial or financial relationships that could be construed as a potential conflict of interest.

Data Availability Statement

The authors emphasize that the raw data will not be freely distributed online to maintain the privacy and confidentiality of those who provide the data. Any external researchers who wish to view the data should email the authors directly, provide a compelling reason, and adhere to ethical restrictions.

References

Format the reference list according to the American Psychological Association (APA) 7th Edition. We require the use of reference management software (such as Mendeley, Zotero, or EndNote). At least 80% of the references must be from primary literature (journals) published within the last 5 years.
