

Rebecca Brodeur

Rebecca Brodeur serves as Senior Director of Teaching and Learning for Robbinsdale Area Schools. Robbinsdale Area Schools serves approximately 10,000 students across seven northwest suburban communities and operates a broad network of schools and programs supported by nearly 2,000 staff members. In her current role, Brodeur is part of the superintendent's senior leadership team and helps guide the district's academic direction, including curriculum, instructional practice, literacy efforts, use of student and implementation data, and professional learning. Her earlier experience includes service as Associate Superintendent in Anoka-Hennepin Schools and prior building leadership roles as a high school principal and assistant principal in that district.

Across her career, Brodeur has built experience leading academic systems in large and diverse Minnesota districts. Her background includes district-level oversight of instructional improvement, management of major budgets and programs, and work to align resources with strategic priorities. She is also known for emphasizing collaboration, transparent communication, and steady partnership with boards, staff, and community members to support consistent teaching and learning across schools.

Brodeur holds superintendent licensure through Minnesota State University, Mankato, and K-12 administrative licensure through Hamline University. She also earned a Master of Education in Educational Leadership and a Bachelor of Arts in Life Science Secondary Education from Bethel University.
