

In the book of Two of Me, it is like that I saw myself in the past. In fact, the feeling in my heart is quite profound. Protagonist's situation is actually similar to my own. But in fact, the protagonist was still quite pitiful when he received the news of his parents' divorce on his birthday. Because when I was young, I was also in the place where my mother and father lived. Maybe this week I lived with my father, and next week I went to my mother's home; but, for some reasons, I finally lived with my mother. To tell the truth, I also thought about whether I could do something like the protagonist, so that my parents could reconcile. I started to do so when I was in elementary school. Take the parent-teacher association for example. I tried to make them appear together, but the result was always not what I imagined. Only my mother came to the association. I did not imagine these things until I was in middle school. I always felt envious when I saw other classmates' parents come together. However, it did not happen to me, so I got used to it after junior high school. Every time I was back, only my mom was there, and we ate meals without my dad. In fact, I admire the protagonist's courage to speak his inner words and let his parents know, and that is something I had not had the courage to do. In short, although the ending did not clearly say whether his parents have finally reconciled, at least, I could experience the mood of the protagonist. The feeling the protagonist's parents bring to the protagonist who must be very happy], and it is also what I have always hoped for.
