

[rain // shuffle] Honey? Are you okay?...You're curled up in a ball just staring at the wall. That's not something people do when they are okay. Would it be okay if I sat next to you?...[shuffle] Thank you. Are you okay with being touched?...Then come lay your head in my lap, dear. [shuffle // petting sfx] There you are, make yourself comfortable on my soft thighs. [chuckle] I know how much you love them. So, what's going on in that pretty head of yours, babygirl?...I couldn't quite hear that, can you speak up?...I know you're bisexual. I am too, remember? You're okay with me, it would be kind of hypocritical if I wasn't okay with you. This has never been a problem before. Did someone say something?...See, there's your first problem. You shouldn't be reading comments online. Everyone is so fucking toxic these days. Anyways, what were they saying?... There are people that don't think bisexuals are real? In 2026? What, that's just, that's fucking dumb. I love my bisexual girlfriend, I've never once thought you were faking it or just trying to get attention. What kind of logic is that?

...Well people online are stupid. Every single one of those people running their mouth online is ignorant. I know you're bisexual. I know you like everyone, men, women, people in between, people that are outside the spectrum, I get it. I'm right there with you, babygirl. I've never had an issue with your attraction, I'm the exact same way. It's actually nice being able to talk to someone and they share their opinions back. We share a lot of interests and that's why we are so compatible. Sure, you ended up in a relationship with a woman. That doesn't make you any less bisexual though. That's kind of the point of being bi, you like everyone. Ending up with a woman is just as likely as ending up with someone else, right?

...You are valid, dear. You are bisexual. Dating me doesn't make you any less bisexual, regardless of what the stupid internet trolls say. Are you really going to take them seriously when they are saying this stuff without even posting their face? I mean almost all of these comments have the user's face actually hidden so they can say it anonymously. None of these people have the balls to say it with their chest so they hide behind a computer screen hoping to make someone like you self conscious. They are just miserable and insecure in themselves, that they can't fathom that someone else isn't. It's quite sad and honestly kind of pathetic when you think about it. I mean, imagine going online and trying to police someone else's identity? Or simply denying it exists? That's fucking crazy, right?...Only you know what you are, babygirl. When we first started dating, you told me you were bisexual. And what did I do?...I lit up, said me too, and asked if you were going to any pride events this year and asked if you wanted to go with me. Is that someone who thinks you are invalid?

...You are welcomed in the queer community because you are a part of it. The B stands for bisexual. You don't need to hide yourself or water yourself down just for someone on the internet. There is always slander about us from both sides, but that doesn't mean you aren't valid. You're allowed to like everyone while being in a queer relationship. It is not a sign that you aren't bisexual. Who cares if people think we are lesbian? You know you aren't and no one else can tell you otherwise. A stranger online can't invalidate you because they don't know you. I know you, dear. I know you are a bisexual woman. I know that is one of the things that strengthened my attraction to you because I felt we could relate. I love you just the way you are. I don't want anyone else, I just want you. [kiss] You're perfect for me. You match my energy, you make me laugh, you take care of me, you're the best girlfriend I could ask for. I love you so much and hate that people online are making you question yourself. You're allowed to be a bi girl, you get that, right?

...I need you to hear it. Not what the random people online are typing from their phones, you need to hear it from me, your girlfriend, the woman who loves you more than anything on this planet. You are valid. You aren't faking your sexuality for attention. You aren't secretly lesbian or secretly lesbian and just lying to yourself. You aren't manipulating me nor do I think you're going to cheat on me. Those are just harmful stereotypes that don't reflect reality. You are allowed to like everyone, you are allowed to date who you want. So you want to date a girl? Who cares? Your attraction to men didn't suddenly disappear once we became official, did it?

...Because you are bisexual. You like men. You like women. You like everyone in between. You like people outside the spectrum. You are attracted to hot people. That's normal. That's valid. There's nothing wrong with that. I still love you. I still want to be with you. I just want to punch these assholes online who are saying this shit. Where did you even find a comment section like this?...Ah, tiktok, that explains it. They are rehashing a lot of old tumblr discourse over that. [chuckle] What you need to know is that whatever those strangers think, don't matter. They aren't representatives of the queer community, I would be willing to bet these are members that don't leave their houses often. When we go to events, there are always bisexual men, women, nonbinaries, and no one ever questions them. They are a welcomed, appreciated, and loved part of our community. Why would that change for you?...It doesn't, dear. You are just like the rest of us. There are always going to be bigots, but you don't have to give them power by listening to them. You're my bisexual girlfriend and I love you. [kiss] Queerness and all. [chuckle // petting fades out]
