Parent/Guardian Communication Assignment

Hello, Parents and Guardians! As you know, at LCHS you are an invaluable part of the equation for student achievement. Your senior is about to exit the world of high school and move into the “real” world very soon, but before they do this, they need to complete their Senior Exhibitions!

As we have communicated, our vision for this assignment is to get your student engaged in a deeper way with something that they are already passionate about, or something that they want to know more about. We have spent a little time on self-introspection with your student in class, and are spending time looking at people who have passions for a wide range of things. It can be challenging for many young adults to answer the question “What is your passion?”, so we are asking you to help - who knows your student better than you? Please talk about some or all of the following items with your student. Have a conversation! Have fun! It can take just a little while or you can talk over several days. Please sign the bottom of the page to show that the conversation has taken place. (Due 9/3)

Discussion Questions:

1. What is something you admire most about your student?
2. What is one of your favorite memories about your student that you think really exemplifies him/her and his/her personality?
3. What are some things that have defined your life in terms of passion? How did you learn what your passions are? Did you know your passions when you were 17/18 years old? Have they changed?
4. What is something you really see your student caring about and having a passion for?
5. What sort of practical project do you think your student would thrive in while accomplishing? What activity do you think they could do in order to learn more about it over the course of a few months? What skill do you think they could develop?
6. What sort of research paper topic can you see your student really digging into? What could they spend a few months reading and researching about and still have an appetite for more?

Please sign to show that you’ve had a conversation with your student about the above.
