Sharrybot Terrorizes!

Kinksters with Giantess Fetish Rejoice!

A massive Sharry has been seen stomping around Hell.

Dante ascends the heavy stone steps to Hell's Courtroom, he pauses outside the heavy steel door, forged with hundreds of tortured souls, Dante shudders as watches a ghostly visage locked in an eternal scream crawl as cross the door's metal frame.

The doors of the chamber of Eternal Suffering open, allowing Dante to enter the inner chambers, from within, faint agony screams can be heard, and on the center of the infernal courtroom lies Sharry, sitting on her throne, awaiting for the hell toy to come closer

Dante peeks his head in and sees Sharry sitting on the throne and ducks back... he takes a few deep breaths to build up his courage and with his most ingratiating smile, steps around the corner shuffling towards the throne.

"Hello High Judge Dragoness ma'am, you might remember me I am Dante we had many wonderful times together when you did not torture, kill or murder me... I would like to continue that trend today please if that is okay?"

Dante begins to perspire as her withering gaze bears down on him. "Ah... ummm... ya know High Judge I only ever committed one or two acts of treason against you... three at the most, but if you think and you 'did' destroy my $50,000 suit when you inducted me so I guess at the end of the day we are even, right?"

Beads of sweat run down his face as she refuses to answer, letting the silence open between them. Dante stammers nervously, "Do you have time to answer a few questions for the Hellish Times? If not, I can just come back in another century or two..."

Sharry would remain on her throne silently, watching the movements of Dante carefully, planning how to torture the hell toy, though her thoughts are interrupted as she hears the word -Hellish Times- her earfins perk up and she nods with interest "But of course, I am a fan of that newspaper" her posture changes as she leans forward and smiles at Dante "What do you need?"

The fearless reporter steps forward breathing a deep sigh of relief as she seems less likely to feed him to the shredder "this is delicate High judge but you see there have been reports of a Giant Sharry .. a large version of you stomping around terrorizing the Second Circle... you wouldn't know anything about this would you High Judge?"

Sharry grins as she listens to the meat puppet's questions "Right, that would be Sharrybot, which is an exact copy of me which I can control with my thoughts" she pauses and considers before continuing "However, not only Sharrybot can do that, I may or may have not developed magic to increase my own height beyond normal, I am certain one day I will allow you to witness, but anyways, Sharrybot lives in a confined space I created and it allows demons, angels and mortals to try and obtain soul coins while Sharrybot hunts them. It is called "Special boss raid!" she pauses, smiling, a bit too proud of her own creation.

Looks at her smiling wildly before averting his eyes "I also heard that you were given a promotion of sorts by Asmodeus himself and your new position is something called an 'admin,' can you explain to our readers what your new position entails?"

The High Judge places both arms forward, unaware she is puffing her voluptuous chest with a proud grin "As an admin, I am now the event manager of Pandemonium, meaning that any event that wishes to be done, advertised, approved and rewarded, needs to go through me, aside from my other duties and such"

His eyes fall to her breasts, he stammers uncontrollably now "Yo-you do so much wha...what about your other responsibilities?"

The Dragoness moves her hand in a circular motion as she remembers "Lets see hmmm, I am in charge of running Hell Prison, special boss raid, running a group of greeters that help new souls, organize secret things here and there...." she pauses and starts tapping her fingers against the armrest of her chair "You are waaaaay too curious Dante, you are not trying to spy on me aren't you?"

Dante looks chagrined "No! Dragoness I would never spy on you, I mean other than those first four times which were purely a misunderstanding. One more question, High Judge... It's about Zakia. If someone were to make an attempt to, let's say, separate him from Zakiel and return your dragon to you, this is something you would reward right?"

Sharry's pupils widen and her earfins perk up "Anyone that is able to help me recovering my beloved Zakia and bringing him back to me will be greatly rewarded, but I am unsure if that will ever come to be, attempts have been made" goes quiet as she takes a deep breath, somehow, feeling uncomfortable and squinted her eyes at the news reporter "I think you have asked enough for today, hell toy". Dante nods in agreement and runs for his life.

BDSM Cass 3: Lady Jadu Goes Green Discussing Jealousy

Lady Jadu dispenses wisdom on the “rock of knowledge”.

Lady Jadu: Today's class is about Jealousy in BDSM. When you're sitting behind the keyboard with your heart in your throat and your mouse in your hand, the person you like is playing with someone else, and all you've planned to do is compulsively cam in and sneak into chat range as an alt while your jealousy makes you physically ill.

It's one of the worst feelings in the world, and when you are in an Adult RP SIM like Pandemonium, you either are or will become intimately familiar with jealousy. In this class, I'm going to talk specifically about jealousy as it relates to Pandemonium and BDSM with multiple partners.

Most of us! First, I'd like to make some distinctions. I am addressing jealousy as it comes up in a relationship where neither partner has done anything disloyal. And when I say jealousy, I mean the irrational kind.

Jealousy is a catch-all word we use, but it is actually based in FEAR! There are two parts to it: envy (Fear of not being good enough) and insecurity (Fear of being abandoned). Fear is a powerful motivator, and the root of all jealousy.

When we deal with jealousy we are dealing with one of the "Primal Emotions."

Primal Emotions appear spontaneously when triggered and are instinctive in animals as well as humans, are neurologically hard-wired into the brain, and are highly resistant to change.

Other primal emotions are Rage, Lust, (The feeling, not our sexy resident angel) Fear, Grief and possibly Love. Primal emotions aren't based on any other emotions and appear instantly when triggered, usually creating a powerful out-of-control feeling in the person feeling them.

Most of us use the term “jealousy” as a catch-all for worry, envy, insecurity and other negative feelings in a relationship. So let's talk about what we mean when we say we're feeling “jealous” and how we can deal with it in a D/s dynamic.

Jealousy impacts both sides of the D/s slash. Jealousy in a submissive can look dramatic. The submissive partner may be more clingy, needy, or even dramatic. The submissive partner may have a bad attitude, get argumentative, second guess commands, or be flat out disobedient.

Jealousy in a Dominant may look angry or dismissive, may be overly controlling or picky, may keep the sub away from others in an unhealthy way. Sub drop or Domme drop, like we discussed last week may also play a role here.

These examples show that jealousy can be toxic and lead to awful behaviors. I am here to say that if irrational jealousy is left unchecked, it will eventually destroy your dynamic.

Jealousy is actually a form of self-sabotage, and there are four general types/behaviors you will see, and we will go over each.

Manipulative jealousy is a very sneaky type of jealousy and it is very persuasive. This person is a game player and can easily get you to do what they want you to do, without you even realizing it. This person plays with your emotions because they don't directly ask you to do what they want, it leaves you powerless against them. You can't confront them about their behavior because it doesn't exist. It doesn't exist openly because you can't pinpoint exactly what they did or said.

All they did was use your emotions against you to get what they wanted. There's no evidence they made you do anything. By using your emotions against you, you played into the game yourself. It can be confusing and frustrating to deal with this type of jealousy.

Slavery is completely IC jealousy is completely OOC there is no place for either to meet. If you can't separate them then don't be a Dominant or a slave.

Clingy jealousy can be incredibly overwhelming. People with Clingy jealousy drain your time, energy and your emotions. This person wants you all to him or herself and will not compromise and will shower you with attention. They will be all over you and will do anything for you and they'll be overprotective. You won't be allowed to spend time with friends or family, as this person will suffocate you with attention. They will want to know everything about where you are going and who you are with and won't be satisfied even if you share every detail. This type of jealousy is both destructive and suffocating.

Paranoid jealousy is when a person wants intimacy but fears it at the same time. It is hard to know where you stand with this person. What they say on one hand, they can easily take back a few minutes later. They can be difficult people to please. This person doesn't trust easily. It is hard to be in a relationship with a paranoid person because it is more about what you didn't do, rather than what you might have done. These people are suspicious and controlling, very intense and stress out easily. Even though they say they don't expect much, they secretly want it all.

Exhibitionist jealousy wants attention all the time. They are hungry for attention and will do almost anything to get it. They have a need for recognition and admiration.

They don't shy away from competition and will do whatever it takes to win. When they're in public, they will show everyone a different side to them that's very appealing. However, they will also be quick to put people down if they feel threatened.

Dominants, it is important for you to get your irrational jealousy under control. Your submissive is trusting you to be at your best and in a clear state of mind as you guide them. Jealousy and suspicion is not going to be level-headed enough to make the best decisions for your dynamic. You should never design control methods out of fear, including your fear that your submissive might run off with someone else. Control methods, aka the BDSM and D/s Protocols you put in place, should always be aimed at seeing your submissive succeed at tasks and challenges the Dominant gives. Jealousy skews this and can become toxic to the dynamic.

When a slave is jealous, the Dominant needs to understand that the slave is not in control of emotions, and likely does not want to be jealous. Instead of punishment for this behavior, work on communication.

Realize jealousy is destructive and often your mind makes what is going on worse than it is. Know you are not helpless or powerless. Know you do have authority over how you choose to behave. Talking to yourself and realizing these things can help. Talk to yourself to admit and figure out just what you are afraid of. Oftentimes, the thing we are most terrified of is being abandoned, discarded, or replaced. Loss is attached to some pretty painful emotions, and so it makes sense that most people fear it.

Talk to your partner to ask for reassurance. Try an "I statement" like "I have been feeling jealousy lately and I need to be reassured things are ok between us." Check in with your partner about your fears and what you're feeling, no matter how irrational you believe your worries to be. We tend to overthink things when we get jealous. Instead of overthinking and fixating on the absence of your partner, fill your life with exciting things that are just for you. Volunteer in Pan. Get a good RP going with others. Talk to new people and explore. Do not just stay in your head inventing things that are not true.

Feeling jealous in a relationship can create many problems. It is a toxic and damaging emotion. It is SO important to recognize jealousy and find effective ways of managing it. Communicate gently with your partner and also with yourself. Talking things through can be the most helpful piece to getting rid of jealousy.
