Abstract

The abstract should provide a concise summary of the research, including the research background, objective, methodology, main findings, and conclusion. The abstract should be written as a single paragraph containing approximately 200–250 words. Citations, tables, figures, and unexplained abbreviations should not be included in the abstract.

Keywords

Authors should provide 3–6 keywords representing the main topics of the research. Keywords should be arranged alphabetically and separated by commas.

Manuscript Structure

The manuscript should follow the structure below. Formatting requirements for the manuscript body are provided in the Manuscript Formatting Guidelines section.

1. Introduction

The introduction should explain the research background, current problems, research gap, objectives, and contribution of the study. Relevant and recent scientific references should be included to support the research context and demonstrate the importance of the study.

2. Literature Review

This section should discuss relevant theories, previous studies, and scientific foundations related to the research topic. Authors should identify limitations in previous studies and explain the novelty or contribution of the proposed research.

3. Materials and Methods

This section should describe the research design, data sources, system development procedures, experimental processes, research instruments, algorithms, models, and data analysis methods. The methodology should be presented clearly to enable research reproducibility.

4. Results and Discussion

This section should present research findings using tables, figures, graphs, or experimental results. Authors should interpret the findings, compare the results with previous studies, and discuss scientific contributions and practical implications.

5. Conclusion

The conclusion should summarize the main findings, research contributions, practical implications, limitations, and recommendations for future studies.

Acknowledgment (Optional)

Authors may acknowledge funding agencies, institutions, laboratories, or individuals who contributed to the research implementation.

Author Contributions

Authors should describe individual contributions to the research and manuscript preparation, including conceptualization, methodology, data analysis, investigation, writing, review, and editing.

Conflict of Interest

Authors must declare any potential conflict of interest related to the research, funding, collaboration, or publication process.

Data Availability Statement

Authors should provide information regarding the availability of research data, datasets, software code, or supporting materials used in the study.

References

References should follow the citation style determined by JIEI using IEEE Style. Authors should ensure that all cited references are consistently formatted according to the required style.
