

Thank you for sharing the Digital Equity Survey with local organizations in your city! Click on your city to view an email template that you can copy and send.

Atlanta

Pittsburgh

Buffalo

Raleigh

Dallas

San Diego

Milwaukee

Seattle

New York City

Washington DC

Atlanta

Hello,

I am reaching out to let you know that a survey is currently being implemented in the Atlanta metro area to deepen our collective understanding of how local organizations work together to advance digital equity and to highlight new partnership opportunities. The survey was commissioned by Digitunity, a national nonprofit focused on bridging the digital divide with a specific focus on device access. All local organizations in the Atlanta metro area - nonprofits, government agencies, businesses, and other public or private sector organizations - are invited to participate in this survey, particularly if they have opinions, experiences, or financial/in-kind resources to share to advance Atlanta's digital equity efforts.

Click here to begin the survey. It should take about 30 minutes to complete, and respondents are able to save their progress to complete it in several sittings. The survey will close on July 1.

If your organization chooses to participate you will receive the city-wide survey results in addition to an individual profile that will include a snapshot of your organization's role and relationships specific to digital equity efforts in the Atlanta metro area. The city-wide results will provide a clear picture of the ways local organizations currently work together to advance digital equity in Atlanta, along with opportunities for new or expanded partnerships.

Please share this email with other organizations in the Atlanta metro area that may be interested in contributing to our collective understanding of digital equity in Atlanta. For more information you can visit Digitunity's website, watch a recording of the survey info session, or view the info session slides. You can also reach out to Karisa Tashjian, Digitunity's Director of Programs, at karisa@digitunity.org.

Buffalo

Hello,

I am reaching out to let you know that a survey is currently being implemented in the Buffalo metro area to deepen our collective understanding of how local organizations work together to advance digital equity and to highlight new partnership opportunities. The survey was commissioned by Digitunity, a national nonprofit focused on bridging the digital divide with a specific focus on device access. All local organizations in the Buffalo metro area - nonprofits, government agencies, businesses, and other public or private sector organizations - are invited to participate in this survey, particularly if they have opinions, experiences, or financial/in-kind resources to share to advance Buffalo's digital equity efforts.

Click here to begin the survey. It should take about 30 minutes to complete, and respondents are able to save their progress to complete it in several sittings. The survey will close on July 1.

If your organization chooses to participate you will receive the city-wide survey results in addition to an individual profile that will include a snapshot of your organization's role and relationships specific to digital equity efforts in the Buffalo metro area. The city-wide results will provide a clear picture of the ways local organizations currently work together to advance digital equity in Buffalo, along with opportunities for new or expanded partnerships.

Please share this email with other organizations in the Buffalo metro area that may be interested in contributing to our collective understanding of digital equity in Buffalo. For more information you can visit Digitunity's website, watch a recording of the survey info session, or view the info session slides. You can also reach out to Karisa Tashjian, Digitunity's Director of Programs, at karisa@digitunity.org.

Dallas

Hello,

I am reaching out to let you know that a survey is currently being implemented in the Dallas metro area to deepen our collective understanding of how local organizations work together to advance digital equity and to highlight new partnership opportunities. The survey was commissioned by Digitunity, a national nonprofit focused on bridging the digital divide with a specific focus on device access. All local organizations in the Dallas metro area - nonprofits, government agencies, businesses, and other public or private sector organizations - are invited to participate in this survey, particularly if they have opinions, experiences, or financial/in-kind resources to share to advance Dallas's digital equity efforts.

Click here to begin the survey. It should take about 30 minutes to complete, and respondents are able to save their progress to complete it in several sittings. The survey will close on July 1.

If your organization chooses to participate you will receive the city-wide survey results in addition to an individual profile that will include a snapshot of your organization's role and relationships specific to digital equity efforts in the Dallas metro area. The city-wide results will provide a clear picture of the ways local organizations currently work together to advance digital equity in Dallas, along with opportunities for new or expanded partnerships.

Please share this email with other organizations in the Dallas metro area that may be interested in contributing to our collective understanding of digital equity in Dallas. For more information you can visit Digitunity's website, watch a recording of the survey info session, or view the info session slides. You can also reach out to Karisa Tashjian, Digitunity's Director of Programs, at karisa@digitunity.org.

Milwaukee

Hello,

I am reaching out to let you know that a survey is currently being implemented in the Milwaukee metro area to deepen our collective understanding of how local organizations work together to advance digital equity and to highlight new partnership opportunities. The survey was commissioned by Digitunity, a national nonprofit focused on bridging the digital divide with a specific focus on device access. All local organizations in the Milwaukee metro area - nonprofits, government agencies, businesses, and other public or private sector organizations - are invited to participate in this survey, particularly if they have opinions, experiences, or financial/in-kind resources to share to advance Milwaukee's digital equity efforts.

Click here to begin the survey. It should take about 30 minutes to complete, and respondents are able to save their progress to complete it in several sittings. The survey will close on July 1.

If your organization chooses to participate you will receive the city-wide survey results in addition to an individual profile that will include a snapshot of your organization's role and relationships specific to digital equity efforts in the Milwaukee metro area. The city-wide results will provide a clear picture of the ways local organizations currently work together to advance digital equity in Milwaukee, along with opportunities for new or expanded partnerships.

Please share this email with other organizations in the Milwaukee metro area that may be interested in contributing to our collective understanding of digital equity in Milwaukee. For more information you can visit Digitunity's website, watch a recording of the survey info session, or view the info session slides. You can also reach out to Karisa Tashjian, Digitunity's Director of Programs, at karisa@digitunity.org.

New York City

Hello,

I am reaching out to let you know that a survey is currently being implemented in the New York City metro area to deepen our collective understanding of how local organizations work together to advance digital equity and to highlight new partnership opportunities. The survey was commissioned by Digitunity, a national nonprofit focused on bridging the digital divide with a specific focus on device access. All local organizations in the New York City metro area - nonprofits, government agencies, businesses, and other public or private sector organizations - are invited to participate in this survey, particularly if they have opinions, experiences, or financial/in-kind resources to share to advance New York City's digital equity efforts.

Click here to begin the survey. It should take about 30 minutes to complete, and respondents are able to save their progress to complete it in several sittings. The survey will close on July 1.

If your organization chooses to participate you will receive the city-wide survey results in addition to an individual profile that will include a snapshot of your organization's role and relationships specific to digital equity efforts in the New York City metro area. The city-wide results will provide a clear picture of the ways local organizations currently work together to advance digital equity in New York City, along with opportunities for new or expanded partnerships.

Please share this email with other organizations in the New York City metro area that may be interested in contributing to our collective understanding of digital equity in New York City. For more information you can visit Digitunity's website, watch a recording of the survey info session, or view the info session slides. You can also reach out to Karisa Tashjian, Digitunity's Director of Programs, at karisa@digitunity.org.

Pittsburgh

Hello,

I am reaching out to let you know that a survey is currently being implemented in the Pittsburgh metro area to deepen our collective understanding of how local organizations work together to advance digital equity and to highlight new partnership opportunities. The survey was commissioned by Digitunity, a national nonprofit focused on bridging the digital divide with a specific focus on device access. All local organizations in the Pittsburgh metro area - nonprofits, government agencies, businesses, and other public or private sector organizations - are invited to participate in this survey, particularly if they have opinions, experiences, or financial/in-kind resources to share to advance Pittsburgh's digital equity efforts.

Click here to begin the survey. It should take about 30 minutes to complete, and respondents are able to save their progress to complete it in several sittings. The survey will close on July 1.

If your organization chooses to participate you will receive the city-wide survey results in addition to an individual profile that will include a snapshot of your organization's role and relationships specific to digital equity efforts in the Pittsburgh metro area. The city-wide results will provide a clear picture of the ways local organizations currently work together to advance digital equity in Pittsburgh, along with opportunities for new or expanded partnerships.

Please share this email with other organizations in the Pittsburgh metro area that may be interested in contributing to our collective understanding of digital equity in Pittsburgh. For more information you can visit Digitunity's website, watch a recording of the survey info session, or view the info session slides. You can also reach out to Karisa Tashjian, Digitunity's Director of Programs, at karisa@digitunity.org.

Raleigh

Hello,

I am reaching out to let you know that a survey is currently being implemented in the Raleigh metro area to deepen our collective understanding of how local organizations work together to advance digital equity and to highlight new partnership opportunities. The survey was commissioned by Digitunity, a national nonprofit focused on bridging the digital divide with a specific focus on device access. All local organizations in the Raleigh metro area - nonprofits, government agencies, businesses, and other public or private sector organizations - are invited to participate in this survey, particularly if they have opinions, experiences, or financial/in-kind resources to share to advance Raleigh's digital equity efforts.

Click here to begin the survey. It should take about 30 minutes to complete, and respondents are able to save their progress to complete it in several sittings. The survey will close on July 1.

If your organization chooses to participate you will receive the city-wide survey results in addition to an individual profile that will include a snapshot of your organization's role and relationships specific to digital equity efforts in the Raleigh metro area. The city-wide results will provide a clear picture of the ways local organizations currently work together to advance digital equity in Raleigh, along with opportunities for new or expanded partnerships.

Please share this email with other organizations in the Raleigh metro area that may be interested in contributing to our collective understanding of digital equity in Raleigh. For more information you can visit Digitunity's website, watch a recording of the survey info session, or view the info session slides. You can also reach out to Karisa Tashjian, Digitunity's Director of Programs, at karisa@digitunity.org.

San Diego

Hello,

I am reaching out to let you know that a survey is currently being implemented in the San Diego metro area to deepen our collective understanding of how local organizations work together to advance digital equity and to highlight new partnership opportunities. The survey was commissioned by Digitunity, a national nonprofit focused on bridging the digital divide with a specific focus on device access. All local organizations in the San Diego metro area - nonprofits, government agencies, businesses, and other public or private sector organizations - are invited to participate in this survey, particularly if they have opinions, experiences, or financial/in-kind resources to share to advance San Diego's digital equity efforts.

Click here to begin the survey. It should take about 30 minutes to complete, and respondents are able to save their progress to complete it in several sittings. The survey will close on July 1.

If your organization chooses to participate you will receive the city-wide survey results in addition to an individual profile that will include a snapshot of your organization's role and relationships specific to digital equity efforts in the San Diego metro area. The city-wide results will provide a clear picture of the ways local organizations currently work together to advance digital equity in San Diego, along with opportunities for new or expanded partnerships.

Please share this email with other organizations in the San Diego metro area that may be interested in contributing to our collective understanding of digital equity in San Diego. For more information you can visit Digitunity's website, watch a recording of the survey info session, or view the info session slides. You can also reach out to Karisa Tashjian, Digitunity's Director of Programs, at karisa@digitunity.org.

Seattle

Hello,

I am reaching out to let you know that a survey is currently being implemented in the Seattle metro area to deepen our collective understanding of how local organizations work together to advance digital equity and to highlight new partnership opportunities. The survey was commissioned by Digitunity, a national nonprofit focused on bridging the digital divide with a specific focus on device access. All local organizations in the Seattle metro area - nonprofits, government agencies, businesses, and other public or private sector organizations - are invited to participate in this survey, particularly if they have opinions, experiences, or financial/in-kind resources to share to advance Seattle's digital equity efforts.

Click here to begin the survey. It should take about 30 minutes to complete, and respondents are able to save their progress to complete it in several sittings. The survey will close on July 1.

If your organization chooses to participate you will receive the city-wide survey results in addition to an individual profile that will include a snapshot of your organization's role and relationships specific to digital equity efforts in the Seattle metro area. The city-wide results will provide a clear picture of the ways local organizations currently work together to advance digital equity in Seattle, along with opportunities for new or expanded partnerships.

Please share this email with other organizations in the Seattle metro area that may be interested in contributing to our collective understanding of digital equity in Seattle. For more information you can visit Digitunity's website, watch a recording of the survey info session, or view the info session slides. You can also reach out to Karisa Tashjian, Digitunity's Director of Programs, at karisa@digitunity.org.

Washington DC

Hello,

I am reaching out to let you know that a survey is currently being implemented in the Washington DC metro area to deepen our collective understanding of how local organizations work together to advance digital equity and to highlight new partnership opportunities. The survey was commissioned by Digitunity, a national nonprofit focused on bridging the digital divide with a specific focus on device access. All local organizations in the Washington DC metro area - nonprofits, government agencies, businesses, and other public or private sector organizations - are invited to participate in this survey, particularly if they have opinions, experiences, or financial/in-kind resources to share to advance Washington DC's digital equity efforts.

Click here to begin the survey. It should take about 30 minutes to complete, and respondents are able to save their progress to complete it in several sittings. The survey will close on July 1.

If your organization chooses to participate you will receive the city-wide survey results in addition to an individual profile that will include a snapshot of your organization's role and relationships specific to digital equity efforts in the Washington DC metro area. The city-wide results will provide a clear picture of the ways local organizations currently work together to advance digital equity in Washington DC, along with opportunities for new or expanded partnerships.

Please share this email with other organizations in the Washington DC metro area that may be interested in contributing to our collective understanding of digital equity in Washington DC. For more information you can visit Digitunity's website, watch a recording of the survey info session, or view the info session slides. You can also reach out to Karisa Tashjian, Digitunity's Director of Programs, at karisa@digitunity.org.