

Terms of Use

If you request a refund for an in-app purchase, we may share with Apple data like install time, app usage, anonymous account ID, purchase use, trial info, and amounts spent and refunded.

This app was created by Arlo Balme, committed to delivering reliable and user-friendly software with ongoing support.

By using these services, you agree to these terms. All rights belong to the company. You cannot copy, change, or reverse engineer the app.

We use your data to provide services, but securing your device and access is your responsibility. We aren't liable for network or data issues or related charges.

The app provides tools for screen mirroring and casting but doesn't control the streamed content. Channels come from third parties and can't be changed by users. Content may change and isn't guaranteed legal or appropriate.

Some third-party apps may restrict mirroring or protect content. We don't bypass these rules; users must comply.

Users are responsible for copyright and privacy compliance when streaming. Unauthorized streaming is at your own risk.

Mirroring may expose sensitive data. We don't store streamed content, so avoid sharing private info.

Third parties may collect data on your streaming; check their privacy policies.

Public or commercial use requires proper licenses.

We don't guarantee all content works on all devices and aren't liable for damages or privacy issues from using the services.

Content may include strong language, violence, explicit material, or ads. Parents should supervise minors.

Users must follow all laws and broadcaster rules. We aren't responsible for misuse or unauthorized access.

Users agree to protect us from claims related to their use, including copyright violations.

We may change, suspend, or end services without notice. After termination, stop using the app and delete related software.

For questions or requests related to your data, please contact us at arlobalme12@gmail.com.