Stories of the Week:

As I was walking on Ring Road because the special booths were up, a man asked me "would you like to try the best cake in the world?" And of course, how could I say no to that? So I tried one of his delicious, moist cake samples and savored the tastiness. But then, I felt a tap on my shoulder. A spoon. A spoon that could've been a tool to help me enjoy more cake, but no. It killed me. And so that was the story of how I died after my own target failed to show up to class and after I had stuffed my face with cake. At least now I can eat cake in peace. -Bianca Ogues

Thrice before I have looked over my shoulder -- paranoid of each fleeting shadow and faint crackle of the green. Twice before this has haunted me -- forcing me into a crazed frenzy for believing it was a delusion. Once before it has beckoned me -- not long before I sprinted away; clutching the last remains of my existence. The, once, faithful friend led to my utter demise as its awkwardness forced me to walk the forbidden path. And now: It is all over. The euphoric feeling of death -- so gratifyingly pleasant as it floods over my entire body. Its effervescent hands tightening its grip with each finger, one by one. Choking every fiber of my once living being and finally -- reluctantly at first -- succumbing to its grasp. Ahhhh, the sweet release of death...

PPS Member of the Week

Hi~! My name is Vivian and I'm a third year Pharm Sci major. I seem pretty quiet most of the time but aha! It's a trick...probably. I'm a bit shy but I like to joke around with others a lot and talk excessively (basically fangirl) about anime, manga, cartoons, video games and a bunch of random things I find on the internet. I also enjoy coding and learning new programming languages. So far I only know python and java but once I have the time I will try to learn C++. Small fun fact is that I'm a leftie!... But I use my right hand for almost everything else other than writing. But yeah, don't mind my quirks! Come talk to me and let's be friends! c:
