Professional stone, tile and grout cleaning contractors are able to handle the large and small aspects of their work. But there are a few things you can do in preparation to their arrival and while the work is in progress to help their job go more smoothly. You may even cut down on billable hours or the possibility of damage to your home and possessions.

Residential Travertine Tile & Grout Cleaning Services

Over time, tile floors and surfaces lose their shine and luster. Scrubbing and mopping do not generally yield the results needed for a deep clean. Because grout is porous and absorbs all the dirt and debris on it, mopping only removes surface soil and not the embedded dirt that causes the grout to become dull. We can restore tile and grout to a better clean.

Our grout-sealing product helps maintain the cleaned grout for months and makes your regular home maintenance more effective. And, if your grout is discolored or you want to update the look, we offer grout re-coloring services in a variety of colors to suit your style.

Beyond just improving the appearance of tile and grout, professional cleaning has several benefits.

It can help extend the life of floors by removing debris that can weaken the tiles. Our cleaning is safe for tile floors of all types including ceramic, porcelain, travertine and limestone. It helps you avoid the expense and inconvenience of completely replacing tile floors

Provide adequate clearance and parking space for work trucks. Some stone, tile and grout cleaning companies have large work trucks that require more clearance or parking space than average vehicles. Contact the company before the scheduled start date and ask them how many work vehicles will need parking space and whether the vehicles are oversized. You may find it useful to walk through the site with your contractor ahead of time so they can point out any potential clearance issues or possible hazards you can move or minimize before the stone, tile and grout cleaning begins.

Keep children and pets away from the construction areas. Your contractors will be concentrating on the work at hand and shouldn't have to watch out for children and pets before, during or after the work. Block off the area the contractor will be using and keep pets and kids away from that area until after the work is finished. This will prevent accidents, injury and the expense of touch-ups.

We enjoy having beautiful homes and the addition of stone tiles, marble and ceramic to our entryways, bathrooms, kitchens and sometimes even other living spaces and outdoor areas. Tiles are very durable and look great for much longer than many other floor and wall coverings. Sadly even this type of material eventually falls prey to dirt, grime and germs that are found in our homes. Mold, mildew, food particles, dust and other grime can enter into the porous surface of the tile as well as into the grouting turning them from a thing of beauty to something less so.

Find a professional tile cleaner that can come in with machines and cleaning materials that are environmentally friendly and don't use a lot of chemical based cleaning materials that leave your home full of hazardous chemicals after they have finished the job. Using the right equipment, an expert tile cleaning company can get to all the dirt and bacteria hiding deep within the tiles and grout, leaving them sparkling clean and germ free. A deep down clean should also restore gleaming color while making your home healthier for everyone. Cleaning the grout can be a bit more difficult as they are more prone to absorbing liquids that are spilled on to them as they are a lot more porous than tile. Once your tiles and grout are properly cleaned, it is recommended that you apply a sealant to preserve the tiles and prevent spills from soaking into the grouting and the tiles causing stains.
