How can improved supply chain transparency be incentivised and standards implemented in a way that does not unfairly exclude emerging market businesses?

Use of the global standards, applicable and recognized globally, is crucial instead of all nations impose their own standards. The LEI, as a global standard for entity identification, can help to identify and verify suppliers in a unique way. Suppliers can use their LEI in their interactions with vendors and financial institutions. Knowing whom you are doing business (KYB) is the first step in ensuring transparency.
