

Hair

Independent

Sister

Layla Care
taker

Creative

Scientist

Mother

Biome

Safe

Strong

Self image

Homeless

Mold

Perspection vs. Reality

Scared

Hygeine Video

Neglect

Hard working

Home

Growth

Creative Sister Science
Kind Funny Thoughtful
Family Centered Reading
Hard working Loving Intelligent
Thinker Passionate
Independent
Caring

One of the first ways that our identities overlap is that we both are a sister. I have two brothers and Layla has one and Andy was a huge part of her identity because she not only had to be a sister, but at times a mom. My brothers mean so much to me although I have not been in the situation Layla was in when I was alone with my brothers it felt like I had to be a mom to get them to behave themselves. Another identity aspect is science I do used either reading or science as a form of escapism in middle school so Layla and I are very similar in that way. It has lead me to a endorsement in science for education I just hope I can one day know as much as Layla does about the natural world. I wanted some contrast between Layla and I so the color theory is quite the opposite to show what is happening around us. Layla went through so much just to have a “normal life”, and try to go to school and learn. She just wanted to let people know what her situation was like, and how she lived, different from everyone else that she knew. I chose a darker theme with a fungi background to show where she was. When they lived in that apartment, and the power was out, and she had to drain the toilet. In contrast in my image the background is a lot brighter, and takes a different natural approach. One of my favorite things to do is hike, and to explore the wood, or just be close to trees in some way, and I am often day dreaming about an adventure, or a fantasy in a book I read. Then I added a yellow rose background for my mom, they are her favorite flower, and I wanted to make it so she was surrounding me as she’s my best friend, and I am just like another version of her. My mom is also very important to me and who shaped me into this person/ adult that I am becoming.