

CULTURAL AND SOCIAL CHANGES IN PHILIPPINES

What is cultural change?

- The nationwide progression for the transition of elderly people services is known as "culture change," and it is founded on individual practices and values.

What is Social change?

- Social change is the alteration of social and cultural organizations brought about by changes in human interactions and connections.

Here are some cultural and social changes that have occurred in the Philippines...

Love yourself

Then:

“Bahay–Kubo”

- Bahay Kubo is the original ancestral home of Philippines, it is a home constructed from natural resources like nipa grass, bamboo, and wood.

Houses

- The impacts of other nations has played a significant role in the way Filipino homes are built presently. Our neighborhood Malay brothers had a pre-colonial contribution on our nation's architectural style. The Philippines, an island nation of over 7,100 islands, experienced colonization from Spain and the United States for more than 400 years, which had a significant impact on its culture and heritage. This is reflected, like in other nations, in the architecture of the Philippines, from national landmarks and historical places to Filipino homes.

Now:

Modern houses

- Rock and bricks structure was brought to the Philippines. They opened the way for the traditional “Bahay na Bato” house. It usually has two floors, the top one constructed of solid wood with the ground surface produced of huge trimmed brick or stone wall surfaces.

Then:

“Harana” or Serenade

- It is a traditional form of courtship music in the Philippines in which a man woos a woman by singing underneath her window at night.

Courtship

- The traditional customs have become increasingly westernized as the Filipino dating culture has developed over time. When compared to traditional courtship, present courtship is very dissimilar. As a result of Spanish and Catholic influences, courtship in the Philippines is said to be much more subdued than in Western cultures.

Now:

Social media chatting

- Digital dating, online chatting, texting, phone conversations, and online chatting all allow for courtship to take place without actual in-person contact.

Illustration by peacock5d

Then:

Outdoor games

- Traditionally, Filipino children spent their days on the street, making joyous memories and adventures by playing outdoor games such as luksong baka, patintero, piko, and tumbang preso.

Games

The main factor influencing the change in Philippine games is technological advancement. As long as you have a device, technology makes it possible to play digital games whenever and wherever you want.

Now:

Mobile games

- Nowadays, Filipinos usually play video games on computers or cellphones. Mobile Legends, Call of Duty, Roblox, and League of Legends are some of the most popular video games among Filipino youth.

Then:

Baro 't saya and barong

- Women in the Philippines typically wear a baro't saya as their traditional outfit. The traditional ensemble consists of a blouse, a lengthy skirt, a kerchief dressed from over shoulders, and a short rectangle of fabric accessorized over the skirt. While barong is dressed by men

Clothing

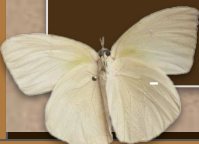

The colonists, especially Spain and the US, had a significant impact on the Filipinos' sense of style. However, the media and the nation's tropical climate also had an impact to some degree.

Now:

Modern clothes

- T-shirts are often worn by Filipinos with denims or trousers for men while skirts for women. The Americans presented the "denim and T-shirts" look to the Filipinos.

Then:

Sending letters

- Filipinos communicate by sending letters to the address of the person with whom they want to communicate, with their written greetings inside the letter.

Communication

- The advancement of technology has made communication much more effective and simple than before; technology has connected every individual on the world.

Now:

Social media

- Nowadays, Filipinos communicate via the internet and social media platforms. Some of the most popular communication tools are messenger, Facebook, emails, and Twitter.

Then:

Unequal rights

- The term "gender equality" doesn't really receive much attention. Women were viewed as weak by society; they were not permitted to vote, married women had no ownership rights. On the other hand, Married men had legal authority over and obligation for their wives to the point where they were able to enslave or beat them without consequence.

Gender equality

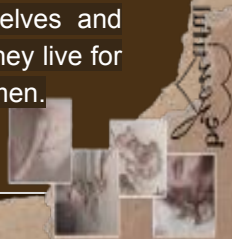

- These social changes in the Philippines are attributable to the courageous women who founded an organization solely to promote women's rights.

Now:

Equal rights

- Youths in today's generation have consistently advocated for gender equality. Equal rights apply to both men and women. Women are able to speak up for themselves and assert their rights, and they live for themselves and not for men.

"THE ONLY THING THAT IS CONSTANT IS CHANGE"

- heraclitus

Love yourself

THANK YOU!

