how better gets better and better

Tiffeny Parker is an Olympic hopeful in bobsled, working towards the 2022 Beijing Olympic Games. Tiffeny has always loved sports and found her true calling as a track and field athlete, finishing high school as a top-ranked triple jumper. Her career as a heptathlete began at Azusa Pacific University where she made multiple USA indoor & outdoor national championship appearances, including the 2016 Olympic Trials.

In 2017, like many successful track and field athletes, Tiffeny made the switch to bobsled. She competed at the 2018 World Cup in Winterberg, Germany with the only 4-woman crew, piloted by her sport icon, teammate and Classroom Champions mentor, Elana Meyers-Taylor. This experience helped her continue to prove that women can be competitive, while supporting the journey towards creating more representation for female athletes in the sport. This past year, Tiffeny won back-to-back gold medals in Lake placid's North American Cup races. Tiffeny has a goal to represent team USA at the Beijing Winter Games.
