2. Accepted in v2.7		Y	BSD 1-clause License	BSD-1-Clause	https://svnweb.freebsd. org/base/head/include/if addrs.h? revision=250887&view= markup	Y	Berkeley Software Design, Inc.	11/30/2017	Submitted by Pedro Gifful with the following remarks: While looking at adopting SPDX tagging for FreeBSD's source tree. I was unable to find references for many BSD license variants. The one-clause variant seems a logical extrapolation of the 3-Clause and 2-Clause BSD licenses. In the case of the URL, the file originated in Berkeley Software Design, Inc., a company set up by Berkeley CSR6 alumnt. The number (1) is likely unnecessary but serves the historical purpose of denoting the historic BSD ancestry.	https://github.com/spdx/license-list-XML/pull/522
2. Accepted in v2.7		Y	Community Data License Agreement - Permissive - Version 1.0	CDLA-Permissive- 1.0	https://cdla. io/permissive-1-0	?	Linux Foundation	10/24/2017	Submitted by Michael Dolan: It is a new license for open data. We would like to have an SPDX identifier early on in its adoption if possible so that early adopters can use it.	https://github.com/spdx/license-list-XML/pull/470
2. Accepted in v2.7		Y	Community Data License Agreement - Sharing - Version 1.0	CDLA-Sharing-1.0	https://cdla.io/sharing-1-0	?	Linux Foundation	10/24/2017	Submitted by Michael Dolan: It is a new license for open data. We would like to have an SPDX identifier early on in its adoption if possible so that early adopters can use it.	https://github.com/spdx/license-list-XML/pull/471
2. Accepted in v2.7		Y	Eclipse Public License 2.0	EPL-2.0	https://www.eclipse. org/org/documents/epi- 2.0/EPI-2.0.txt	?	Eclipse Foundation	8/21/2017	from Wayne Beaton wayne beaton@eclipse-foundation.org The EFIL-20 has been approved by the OSI and the Eclipse Board of Directors. We'd obviously like to see it included in the SPDX license islet. FWIW, we're updating our legal documentation requirements to make heavy use of SPDX. License name: Eclipse Public License 2.0 Proposed identifier: EFIL-20. URL: https://www.eclipse.org/legal/epi-2.0/ The Eclipse SOSI-approved (flough only just recently and so it's not posted yet) The Eclipse CMR and Eclipse OpenJ9 projects are both currently switching over to the new version and we expect numerous other existing Eclipse projects on so as well. The Eclipse Foundation is investing in the use of SPDX and since we expect many/most of our projects to update to the new version of the license, shaving representation in SPDX is critical path.	https://github.com/spdx/license-list-XML/pull/459.
4. 2. Accepted in v2.6	2.6		TCP Wrappers License	TCP-wrappers	http://rc.quest. com/topics/openssh/lice nse.php#tcpwrappers	No	Wietse Venema	3/30/2016	From Tom Incorvia: Please consider including the TCP-wrappers template license in the SPDX license list. This license is associated with a very common open source component, TCP-Wrappers. Although not used much outside of TCP-wrappers, this license is very frequently referenced with regards to TCP-wrappers as a subcomponent in other open source projects. If you Google search the specific phrase Tcp-wrappers license? you will see ~1,200 hits — there are tens of thousands more hits for a less specific search — FVI, "merchantibility" is misspelled in the license, and can be used for definitive searches for the license.	Discussed on Sept 29, 2016 call. could templatize second paragraph, but dno't need to so won't now.

for 2.5					aHTTPServer/blob/mast er/LICENSE.txt				I have come across the license below several limes now. It is generally stated to be the 'RSD license.' It is the SPOX BSD-3-Clause minus clause 2, 'Redistributions in binary form must reproduce the above copyright notice, this list of conditions and the following disclaimer in the documentation and/or other materials provided with the distribution.' Below is an example for the CocoaHTTPServer. Other project that use this license include TaffyDB (tafflys), CocoaLumberjack, and several projects produced by Deusty LLC. This license is not hugely popular, but the attribution as the 'RSD License' for multiple projects is potentially confusing which may ment a separate SPDX license if for no other reason than avoiding confusion regarding this below THE SSD license if the conductor regarding this below THE SSD license.

No			Per Cristian Martinez cristian martinez@univ-paris-est.fr LGPL-IR is the Lesser General Public License for Linguistic Resources (electronic dictionaries, tree banks, word nets, syntactic grammars, annotated corpora, etc), formally a collection of data about language prepared so as to be used with application programs. Linguistic data may be easier to fix and extend than programs, but available manpower is useless if data are not modifiable this is the example of linguistic resources with restricted distribution policies which suffer from the same modify the data with an appropriate license. 2. Accepted for 2.1	2.1		- continued	LGPLLR continued	https://raw. glithubusercontent. com/UnitexGraml.abi/LG PL-LR/master/LGPL-LR.				Per Sam Ellis via lists spdx.org Further background information on the license can be found here: http://2009.mill. infollMcjordfrMLL2009-Sciences-Sebastien_Paumier-LGPLLR.pdf How widespread is the license? Googling for the license name suggests that the license is at present very niche, with the primary references being in various academic papers. Nonetheless I was able to find a few recent (2009, 2010, 2013) examples of software that included this license (in addition to those that Cristain listed below). Is the short name sensible? The proposed short name is also how the license is abbreviated on various websiles to looked at, though there is inconsistency as to whether or not a hyphen is present. The license carries no obvious version number, so not including a version in the short identifier looks correct. Does the license fall under the scope of SPDX? SPDX primarily covers "software" licenses, by which Ithink is usually meant licenses for "code" or derivations thereof. This license covers data, but the data is primarily for consumption by software, and thus one can expect this data to be found in or alongside software releases. What does FOSSology make of the license? FOSSology 2.6.1 reports the license as LGPL. Per Kevin Fleming kevin@splemining us What is the relationship of this license to the LGPL as published by the FSF? While the name "LGPL' is bound to cause confusion (especially because the Lesser part of the LGPL provides additional freedoms that don't seem to be relevant for data).

4. Not Accepted			Sun BSD-3-Clause	Sun-BSD-3-Clause	http://net-snmp. sourceforge. net/about/license.html	?	?	8/4/2016	The Sun entry in the Net-SMMP "license" is actually a variant of the standard BSD-3-Clause license because of the addition of "Use is subject to license terms below. This distribution may include materials developed by third parties. Sun, Sun Microsystems, the Sun loop and Sciaris are trademarks or registered trademarks of Sun Microsystems, linc. in the U.S. and other countries."	Discussed on Aug 4 & Dec 22: (impacts decision on Net-SNMP above) if want to use license expression, then would be good to add this as new license, to avoid using LicenseRef- to identify full stack. It is this used deswhere (bestdes Net-SNMP) - deem't appear so, some instances of it appearing also but only seems to be in old versions of Net- SNMP.
										Personally I am not a fan of the 'package' licenses such a Python-20. They typically represent the combination of licenses found in a specific version of a specific package. There are lots of versions and lots of packages out there. How should we decide which of these deserves a license list entry. The use of SPDX expressions allows representation of all of these combinations of license without expanding the SPDX license without expanding the SPDX license list, so I consider if to be a more scalable solution.
										Another view on this comes from license compliance. For example, in the company I work for I know that my legal team are very familiar with BSD and MIT licenses and they and I would have an easy time If wanted to use or contribute on a project that uses these. On the other hand, every differently named license that my legal team have not seen before creates a lot of work for them and me. Most likely in this case we would spot that the constituent licenses are ISSD and MIT and all would be fine, but it still movies some time to make that comparison and check that we all agree of smaller and more readily identifiable licenses can help to reduce the cost of license compliance. My expectation is that this scenario is true for many companies as well as the open source community. Farmliair licenses are easy to deal with, unfamiliar licenses involve more work. Consier adding note as to use in Net-SNMP b/c this part is so common to that license stack.

					bin/cvsweb/src/share/mi sc/license.template? rev=1.3&content- type=text/x-cvsweb- markup				Per Dennis Decker Jensen ddj@mailc.net There is no standard license header. The attached license template is from the OpenBSD project itself as linked to, and as it is used there currently (CVS revision 1.3). Many software components of OpenBSD are in widespread use, notably OpenSSH, LibreSSL, many source components of openisos are in widespread use, notably openisosh, Loressk, inetcat, m.g. PC. OpenBGPD, OpenBGPD, openATPD, OpenSMTPD, mandoc, and OpenIKED, besides the main project OpenBSD itself which is commonly used in firewalls. Hence there is a need to take into consideration its license, which is not exactly the ISC license. The ISC license of the OpenBSD project is the same as the ISC license expent the word "and" is The ISC luefries or the OpenisSD project is the same as the ISC luceries, except the word and is used in the former, and the word combination "and/or" is used in the larger, and the word combination "and/or" is used in the larger. ISC itself modified the ISC license in the year 2004. In a sense the ISC OpenBSD license is version 1.0 of the ISC license while the current ISC license for the years 2004 and forth would be version 1.1 or version 2.0. However, ISC provides no official eversion number on Ist license, so I recomment not attaching any version information to the short identifier. The confusion regarding the replacement of "and" with the word combination "and/or" appears to never have been resolved, since there are contradictory statements from ISC (Paul Vixie), FSF, and the University of Washington. Safe to say, OpenBSD has chosen to stay with the old version of the ISC license, because of simpler choice of words, and no perceived need to change. The difference may be interpreted differently by lawyers and courts, hence this request for a new license (variation).
									Wikipedia has links to discussion by Paul Vixie, etc., and FSF has links to the concerns of the University of Washington.
									As far as I can tell, U of W complained to FSF about the interpretation of the word "and", hence FSF complained to ISC, which then modified the ISC license to use the word combination" and/or" instead. However, it appears that U of W afterwards complained about the use of the word combination "and/or"? If you look closely at the dates, and what Paul Vixie is saying, it is not entried cear what the fuzz is about, and which party actually had any concern. What remains certain is that lawyers do not agree about the importance of the difference.

License List Field	Explanation of SPDX License List Fields
	The following information describes how each field on the License List is treated.
Status	Assigned by the SPDX Legal Working Group
1. Under Review	A license addition has been requested and is currently under review.
2. Accepted in v	The license was added to indicated version of the SPDX License List. The SPDX License List version indicated may be yet to be released in the case where a license is accepted in between SPDX License List releases.
3. On Hold.	This means that more research is needed or there are other extenuating factors that have prevented a decision on the addition of the license to be made. See the Notes for more information.
4. Not Accepted.	The license was reviewed by the Legal Team and it was decided to not add the license to the SPDX License List at this time.
Actual Release	Actual Release of the SPDX License List to include a License
License Full Name	Name of the license as taken from its text or derived from its context.
	The full license name may omit certain words, such as "the," for alphabetical sorting purposes.
	No commas are used in the full name of the license.
	The word "version" is not spelled out for space reasons.
	For version, use lower case v and no period or space between v and the version number.
	No abbreviations are used after the full license name.
License Short Identifier	aka "SPDX license Identifier"
	Short identifier to be used to identify a license match to licenses contained on the SPDX license list in the context of an SPDX file
	Identifier should have no spaces in it
	Identifier consists of a short name, abbreviation, or acronym for the license
	Where applicable, license abbreviation will be followed by a dash and then the version number, in X.Y format
Source/url	URL for the standard text of the license, if an official standard text exists.
	Alternatively, another website that has a text version of the license, or source code that contains the license text.
Template Needed	Yes = License has replaceable text, and a template is needed for matching purposes.
Date Submitted	The date that a license inclusion request was submitted to the SPDX Legal Working Group.
Notes	Concise discussion points about the license.

Exception List Field	Explanation of SPDX License Exceptions List Fields
	The following information describes how each field on the License Exceptions list (whether on the webpage or within the spreadsheet) is treated.
Status	Assigned by the SPDX Legal Working Group
1. Under Review	An License Exception addition has been requested and is currently under review.
2. Accepted in v	The License Exception was added to indicated version of the SPDX License Exceptions List. The SPDX License Exceptions List version indicated may be yet to be released in the case where a License Exception is accepted in between SPDX Exceptions List releases.
3. On Hold.	This means that more research is needed or there are other extenuating factors that have prevented a decision on the addition of the License Exception to be made. See the Notes for more information.
4. Not Accepted.	The License Exception was reviewed by the Legal Team and it was decided to not add the License Exception to the SPDX License Exceptions List at this time.
Planned Release	Planned Release of the SPDX License and Exception List to include a specific exception.
Full name of Exception	Name of the Exception as taken from its text or derived from its context.
	The full exception name may omit certain words, such as "the," for alphabetical sorting purposes.
	No commas are used in the full name of the exception.
	The word "version" is not spelled out for space reasons.
	For version, use lower case v and no period or space between v and the version number.
	No abbreviations are used after the full exception name.
Exception Identifier	aka "SPDX Exception Identifier"
	Short identifier to be used to identify an exception match to exceptions contained on the SPDX exception list in the context of an SPDX file
	Identifier should have no spaces in it
	Identifier consists of a short name, abbreviation, or acronym for the exception
	Where applicable, exception abbreviation will be followed by a dash and then the version number, in X.Y format
Source/url	URL for the standard text of the exception, if an official standard text exists.
	Alternatively, another website that has a text version of the exception, or source code that contains the exception text.
Notes	Most importantly, a reference to the license(s) to which this exception typically applies.
	May refer to an SPDX license that has been deprecated.
	May include the date of release, if known, using day-month-year format.
	Contains only facts or links to information. No interpretaion allowed in these notes.
Text	Full exception text or, in the spreadsheet, reference to separate .txt file named by SPDX Exception Identifier that contains full exception text
Example of use	If known, a URL to a specific open source licensed package where this exception is used.
	Any additional information or columns contained in the spreadsheet version of the SPDX Exception List are not part of the official SPDX Exception List and are included for tracking or informational purposes only.
