

This image shows a long, narrow grid of small squares, likely a data table or spreadsheet. The grid is composed of many rows and columns, with two vertical red lines marking specific columns. The grid is positioned at the top of the page.

Below the grid, there is a row of text. The text is very small and difficult to read, but it appears to be a header or a set of labels for the columns in the grid above. There is a small black square on the left side of this row.