GENERAL NOTES:

Any recipes that call for Larval Cores are not worth it purely for nanites, since those can be refined for 50 nanites.

(In the future I might still gather data on said recipes over time just for posterity. Those recipes are otherwise marked as TBD.)

Some recipes don't mix and match the same as others so are listed separately as Alternate Recipes due to slightly different requirements.

Farming Livestock Tips

Larger animals drop up to x3 of a product.

Look for planets that have Abundant Fauna - This Link lays down all the different names for bottom, middle, and top tier descriptors.

A mod for increasing stack size or curiosity items is highly recommended - make sure it is not outdated.

Herd spawns aren't always perfectly reliable, and creatures at your farm will despawn if you wander too far (or jump/jetpack too high). My tactic is to START 200-300 units out and feed and gather creatures while walking slowly back towards base, gathering more as I go. The trick is to walk (not sprint), and maintain Line of Sight so they stay on you. Once my herd is acceptable in size, I stay at my base and craft while checking Livestock Units every few mins.

WHERE TO FIND:

Creature Eggs

- The most difficult to find imo, but I have had the most success on hazardous planets (usually toxic). They drop from dino-esque type creatures that are distinctly prey animals (herbivores usually), and typically have horned and scaly looks and more stout bodies.

Fresh/Warm Milk

-The most easy to find imo, and I find it most commonly on what I think of as deer-like or horse-like creatures, although I would say the range of creatures that drop milk seems to be the widest. Easiest to find on temperate climates.

Synthetic Honey

Mushroom-like, "goober" creatures with tentacle-legs drop this. They can be found in caves but also right on the surface. They hop/bounce around.

Proto-Milk & Proto-Sausage

Found on Gek-like creatures, also affectionately called "Mogara" by the NMS community. They can be any size & are usually bipedal. They can be found anywhere.

Abyssal Eye

These recipes aren't worth the effort, but if you insist, you can find abyssal eyes (2-3) near sunken buildings which you scan for with your Exocraft. They are labeled with RED !'s in the analysis visor. You only have a few seconds to pick them up before they disappear & they will roll downhill.

Larval Core

Not worth cooking with these, but you find them by using your exocraft to scan for Abandoned Buildings. You can get ~30 per location. They despawn a few seconds after dropping. Pulse Spitter is effective against them (don't waste time killing the ones you don't have to as they keep respawning).

Leg Meat & Crab 'Apple'

Kill crabs for the meat, feed them for 'Apples'. Crabs scurry on the ground underwater (especially if you disturb the ground with your MT), but also are on land. Can be small or huge & can also be aggressive/predatory. Land-based crabs seem the most common on toxic planets.

Feline Liver & Leopard Fruit

Found by killing feline/cat-like creatures (predators, but not always aggressive to player), but if you want the fruit you need to feed them their bait of choice. Seem to be common most anywhere.

Salty Fingers

Found by killing sea creatures with longer appendages like jellies, or winged-fish.

Diplo Chunks

Diplos are quadrupedal Dinosaur creatures usually with long necks, and you'll need to kill them for the meat. There are no recipes that call strictly for this item where you cannot substitute it for something else. I haven't found them myself yet but I also expect these to have eggs if you feed them.

Scaly Meat

Found by killing predatory dinosaur-like creatures that are also typically horned and/or scaled and are typically bipedal

Fiendish Roe

I haven't found this yet, but my best guess is that it comes from an undersea horror or predatory animal (probably the ones that spawn randomly while mining things undersea). Roe is another term for "fish eggs".

My Bases | PC | Euclid | Normal - Most of these I use for creature farming.

Paradise Primus -Spiffy HQ - Not the best view Of the base itself, but I love this view which is why I built a base here. Generous Fauna, T3 Economy

Hostile Hills: Milk and Egg Farm- Primary herd usually spawns right "under" the overhanging area of the base.

(There are hostile crabs for apples/legs, and plenty of felines for feline livers or berries, they will also kill the egg-layers)

Caustic Crater: Proto Farm - There are 2-3 decent herds that spawn nearby, you can chain-lure them all over to your base. Moderate amounts of Fresh and Wild Milk creatures - Decent for farming ALL MILK types.

Solaris Wilds (Galaxy Core) Milk Farm & Apple Farm - Large herds spread out all over. -Another planet hosts a trade post that you can find an S-Class Hauler 48-8. Two other bases are near it.

Pleasant Prairie - Farm for Sticky 'Honey'. There are LOTS spread out nearby, including Huge ones (3x honey) that you'll need to lure over a bit.

The Tower of Frost - Euclid Hub

- At the HUB in Euclid & you can gather ~16k Frost Crystal (Teleport to the top, then follow the spiral down). T3 System as well.
