About OPU
Opu Labs' mission is to improve how the global skincare industry exchanges data, information, and rewards in a way that benefits patients, dermatologists, treatment centers, brand specialists, and product manufacturers. To make that happen, we're building a suite of blockchain-based technology platforms – starting with a mobile skincare app – and a token-based ecosystem that will reward its users. To raise awareness of our technology, and to encourage participation in our ecosystem, we'll be launching an Initial Coin Offering (ICO) in July 2018.
Read more about our app on the Opu Labs website.

Opu Coin & Our Token Ecosystem
Our value-driven ecosystem is underpinned by our native Ethereum-backed token — the Opu Coin (OPU). These are tokens given to anyone who makes a valuable contribution to our suite of platforms. Say a customer submits their skincare data to our AI (Artificial Intelligence) platform, or signs up for a dermatologist's clinical trial, or a new skincare brand wants to use decentralized data to find a user group for a new product. OPU will become their standard payment method.
In these scenarios, and many others, the exchange of information will enable improvements in skincare health. As our community grows, and more people join our platforms, the greater OPU's usage becomes. This means our tokens will be in demand, so now is the perfect time to get involved.

FAQ
What is an ICO?
An ICO or "Initial Coin Offering" is a sale of virtual "coins" or "tokens" to buyers who wish to purchase virtual currency in order to trade, hold as a digital asset, or use on the issuing company's service network.
Which industry problem(s) are you addressing?
The skincare industry is a multibillion dollar international business. However, most consumers get advice from unreliable sources: social media, friends, and product marketers. Everyone's skin is different and yet despite the strong need, few consumers get advice from skincare professionals. The perception is that specialist consultations are "too expensive", or for many, there's no obvious locally available service.
