NewsBlur		Web (can be hosted or paid), Mobile	Free/Paid (OSS)	Chrome WebApp	NewsBlur is very similar to Google Reader with a sleek design. It can easily import feeds from GoogleReader or through OPML import. NewsBlur supports sending to Instapaper, River of News, and many other standard RSS reader features. It has four advantages: 1) Has 4 different view options. It can show the original site, feed, text or story view. 2) It has training, it hides stories you don't want to read based on tags, keywords, authors, etc. 3) Highlights stories you want to read, based on the same criteria. 4) It rebuilt the social community that Google had stripped out of Reader, users can share stories through their BlurBlog, and discover new content by following friends' BlurBlog's	The service has had some slow down with the exodus of Google Reader users, but the solo developer who created it is working tirelessly getting it up to speed, so this should not be a limitation for much longer.	www.newsblur.com

[1] In only 4 seconds
All my rss's

Then it's faster then the internet. I've got a lot of items.

I think there are more with a lot of items. So I take the second a little lite, but I'm going to watch.
