[1] I have repeatedly expressed my deep disappointment that the Security Council failed to agree on a dedicated mechanism for effective accountability for the use of chemical weapons in Syria. This can be seen in the actions and inactions of Russia, China, and Germany's negative vote on SCR-4. While not a perfect resolution, as many won't be, it was a clear step in the right direction. With this resolution I'm calling upon the General Assembly to hold the Security Council responsible for its ineffectiveness. The seriousness of the recent allegations of the use of chemical weapons in Syria requires a thorough investigation using impartial, independent and professional expertise. I reaffirm my full support for the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons and its Fact-Finding Mission in undertaking the required investigation. The team is already in Syria. I am informed that their operations plan to visit the site is completed and they are ready to go. I am confident that they will have full access, without any restrictions or impediments to perform their activities. Syria today represents the most serious threat to international peace and security.
