| 36 | Noelle's "situation" causes her to be pursued by Endbringers, resulting in the destruction of the Traveler's Home city. | 15 - Colony | 7/12/17 | | =) | 17 - Migration | I got this kind of out of order. Endbringer cause the destruction which caused her "situation" | | | | |
| 37 | The Travelers are all Cauldron capes and Noelle is the result of a faulty/bad vial. It was Trickster's idea to get the vials. | 15 - Colony (Pt 2) | 7/19/17 | | =) | 17 - Migration | Faulty Vial and only drinking half a vial...close enough! | | | | |

| 46 | The Passengers (or the things that make them) are performing a 300 year science experiment. They seed our planet with the potential for trigger events and observe and report as we destroy ourselves. If not enough people are triggering, they send down Endbringers...who attack separate locations and cause enough devastation to induce triggering, but don't rampage and destroy the world outright. How Scion and Cauldron fits into all this? I don't know yet. Lets call this a theory in progress. | 18 - Queen (Pt 2) | 8/23/17 | | =) | 26 - Sting | I'm gonna give myself a win for this. The endbringers don't fit into this, but everything else is close enough to what I predicted that I feel like I deserve a green smiley face. Don't @ me. | | | | |
