5/4/2020 13:15:28	spacedoutman	Secure	I'm a bit disappointed you won't share the status of jace's vote (not even if he was active or not, just if it was counted anywhere in the meta post). I'm not sure what purpose it serves leaving it ambiguous? The roster is always known and normally even yhase we would be able to match the meta into between the roster count and known rotes. So what makes removing a person so special that we can no longer do this talliyen? It potentially puts me in a lot of jeopardy - if it is counted in the meta, then the only way the votes match is if Mr Shripes targeted me, meaning I need to reveat to renuer that fru protected or that town knows who I am so that the Breach can't impersonate me easily. If it is not counted, then I'm Ok.	I'll probably laik about this a bit in the post game thread, but we as a community use collected vote courts as a sort of crutch. Theres a reason votes are a sort of crutch. Theres a reason votes are a community of the court was a construction of the court was intentional and helps remove that crutch. Town shouldn't be able to win solely on seems and vote analysis	It's for this reason specifically. If we give info about who voted, then players get more info than they're supposed to be given. You're not supposed to guess everything based on one phase of info.	Not the hosts (obviously) but maybe this was done so that you would have to do more detective instead of just relying on costs or even a vice taily? The games I've played where there is no tally helps the wolves out a lot. They can actually use their vote to get stuff done without being called out immediately for it.

I'm not faling for it. I was planning to wait 'at least' until Phase 4 to reveal in case Myo turned out to be Mr. Lie, and I vould like to try to catch another wolf in that time.  Now, If DMT is telling the ruth, 'and' spaced is a wolf, then that actually makes me feel good about my suspicione serlier. I know wokes tend to list off some of their own when they make a list of suspicious palayers and Myo was the first to bring up spaced, which is why I had planned to investigate him from the start. However, if spaced was Plague Doctor-d, that would mean the wolves are going hard to frame him. I'm not sure why they would, if they wanted someone dead then they have the means to kill them, and there's no way they could have had any information on spaced before Myo accused him. Now, I have to make a choice. I feel like investigating DMT might lead me into a trap, and I doubt the wolves would Plague Doctor spaced two turns in a row, so fim groma take that chance. I've decided to vote for somebody that has a single vote right now. Thoughts anyone?	Wouldn't be the weirdest unit I've seen	Cars are measured in horses, too. Maybe there should be a Barn Measurement System. 16 Mice to a Horse. 3	Did some research: one normal house mouse is around 3 inches long (excluding the tail). So, if you have 16 of those, you give yourself 48 inches, or 4 feet. Do you think that this measurement is accurate? It seems pretty reasonable to me, actually.
			I think I believe Ghost's claim over Myo's, Isn't it convenient that Myo claims to be another anomalie on the town side? It's weird, I was actually getting town vibes from Myo. 			Another thought about Acco. If they are a worr, they noperuny have not been truthful about Cousin Johnny being dead, and it was someone else that died. That would give the town a much higher sense of security, and make them much more willing to believe the seer.

			phase has a massive hole in it.
			Very quickly, people are going to start asking why the wolves aren't killing German. I don't hink German can survive (by my calculations of what the wolves would need to win after a Samerl lynch, if I'm doing my math right) at least 5 phases of that question barring any extra inactivity shrike deaths on the town's side. There's not really any chance of killing off all the town who would point this out, especially with notal's skill likely not going off tonight and the fact that some of the "town" who would point this out are neutrals who we can't afford to waste kills on.
			At that point, it's all going to come down to millenialwitch, and while I'm sure they can survive several phasesI don't think they can outlast every other town (especially with no kill).	Busing sameri isn't the right choice here imo. rn its 4 days to parity, but		I don't think bussing Sameri is a great choice. Might be better if they bussed millennial, but I

Honestly, this stuff is really cod and liwsh I had gothen into it earlier. Funnily enough, German forgetting to change their vote and thus messing up what they had planned so that German will now slay Silent might actually save the game. That combined with the townie withdrawing now means that (if I nathed right), the volves only need 3 more	pretty huge at this point. Gains a lot of time	the end of each phase. 			I really hope one of the wolves does the math and notices how close they are to winning.  oh wait, nevermind, I just checked the math again and I think it's actually 4 phases. A single extra inactivity removal on the town's side would make it 3 phases though. I think that's entirely doable without busing Sameri next phase like they were planning.	Its 4 actually. I have a counter made for this. Leslie doesn't count. That said, getting neutrals on their side		Yeah, the town withdrawal helped a lot.
