Waist	I measure 28", but I wear 26" in jeans. I am generally a 4 or 6 in pants (approx.)	Tried but did not buy Tried and did buy Not able to try		07/07/2019 - added a new Silver Jeans purchase - updated info on my previous purchases (Madewell, AGOLDE in black) - fabric composition guide		97-100% cotton	These will generally stretch a full size. Get the ones that you can squeeze on and that are snug and they will loosen up for you. Generally size down in waist size to achieve this. Personal note: I stay away from new 100% cotton jeans. I've become very grateful for even a small % of elastane because it helps the smaller waist pants get up over my thighs and butt. These will stretch out half a size. Get the size that is comfortable and they will loosen up a bit but still fit. Generally your true size . These are very stretchy and may loosen up a full size if you do not suck anything into your jeans. I suggest sizing down as long as they are still comfortable because they will stretch out a bit naturally, especially at the waist. If you're buying thicker material tops in regularly, size true to size .
Hips	Measure 40". Hips and butt.					< 94-95% cotton, 1-2% elastane
Inseam	29 or 30" is perfect. 28" is not too cropped.					3-4% elastane
Previous Jeans	Levi's 721 (black, dark blue, medium blue). Very durable, very comfortable, but did not fit my waist. When I bought them 4 years ago I just didn't know how jeans should fit. I still recommend them if they fit you!
Brand	Model	Wash (Colour)	Relevant Measurements	Comments
American Eagle	Ne(x)t Level High Waisted Jegging	Empor Black	Rise 10 1/4" Inseam 31" (varies)	- too thin - slight waist gapping
AG	Farrah	Grey mist	Rise 9 7/8" Inseam 30"	- I tried a 27 and it was several too sizes too big at the waist. (???) - Going down a size or two would mean not fitting over thighs. - too much rayon in the fabric. - Not high enough rise
Old Navy	Bulk-In Sculpt	Black	Rise 10-10.5" unclear Inseam (varies)	- Fit super strangely. Too tight some places, too loose others. Too thin.
Topshop	Jamie	Black	Rise 10-10.5" unclear Inseam (varies)	- Actually fit really well, but too thin for me! More jegging-like. - Expected for the price, honestly.
Citizens of Humanity	Chrissy	Midline (medium blue)	Rise 11.25" Inseam 29"	- LOVE THESE. Beautiful, thick, quality denim, high enough rise in front and back. - The only problem is these are slightly too small for my thighs, and as a result I can't pull them up quite high enough. I still wear them anyway all the time, but keep that in mind when you try them. - Very similar to the above. I tried them on and they had the same thigh problem so I passed.
		Moon Dance (gray)		- These are NOT similar and it's because they're 40% rayon. Too soft and although I could get them on, it caused this big wrinkle across each of my thighs that the other Chrissys did not have due to being a thicker, sturdier fabric.
		Black		- This is called a slim model but is a skinnier with a slightly wider leg opening. - I could not even get these over my thighs.
	Olivia	Black	Rise 11.25" Inseam 29"	- These have the same model name as the other Olivias, but are different. You can tell the difference by looking at them only - the Premium Vintage Olivias have a leather patch on the back, and say Premium Vintage in curvy in a tag inside on the back. - These have much more room in the thighs and butt and did not have the same problem as the Chrissy for me. - BUY A SIZE DOWN. They are 98% cotton and stretch out a full size.
	Olivia (Premium Vintage line)	Licorice	Rise 11.25" Inseam 29"	- These are excellent. Thick, quality denim just like COH (AGOLDE is owned by COH). - Very similar to my Midline Chrissy (except same pocket shape, for example) but fits better in the thighs. - I would straight up label these as a curvy cut. - I kind of bought these blind because the Freeway fit so well, even knowing that the fabric composition was different between the two colours. I ordered to the store from Artizia while they were on sale and we all know their return policy. - They fit very well but are much too thin. This seems to be common with black jeans for whatever reason. - Have not had much chance to wear them yet, but I'll still make as much use of them as I can. update 07/07/2019: I have been wearing these a lot and I'm happy with them! I think they will fade a bit quicker than I'd like but that seems to be the nature of high cotton % black jeans, unfortunately. Like my Madewell jeans, I sometimes wash 'em a size 2/3 instead of 0/0 because these are 4% elastane and stretch a lot. If I'm looking something thick in though it's fine, which I do about half the time.
AGOLDE	Roxanne	Freeway (medium blue)	Rise 11.5" Inseam 28"	- These were very deceptive. I bought a 28 and 27, and at first I thought the 27 fit well, so I took the tags off then washed them to raise out the dye, wore them once, and they were too big and sliding down, so I ended up having to take the tags off the 28 which was slightly tight, and wore them instead. - They fit very well in the thighs and hips/butt, lots of room there. The only problem is they are too tight in the knees! Maybe meant for a slimmer 20, even though they do happen to have the room in the thighs and hips. The knees bother me too much to keep wearing these so that's an unfortunate loss of money. - They are a bit thin, but not as bad as Old Navy or Topshop.
	Roxanne	Black	Rise 11.5" Inseam 28"	- Too thin. - Did not fit across thighs and hips. Winkling, too tight. Waist gap in the back. - I really loved these, honestly. Perfectly thick, fit so well, good quality, good price. - Unfortunately just 1/2" - 1" too low a rise. - However they have recently come out with higher rise curvy jeans that I have not tried! (in different colours/colours). - Definitely check them out and I would buy without hesitation if I saw a skinnier in a wash I like. (update 07/07/2019: I did buy them! see below)
Abercrombie & Fitch	Simone	Bisque wash (dark blue)	Rise 10.5" Inseam (varies)	- I think Silver Jeans listened to my review of the Avery, because these are very similar to the Avery in Indigo, just with a higher rise and different fabric %. - Sizing: I had to go two sizes down I ended up in a 24 with these. - Fabric %: the cotton is a little lower than I prefer, but the price and fit are just so right. It still feels like thicker denim anyway. - These are the best cut of all my jeans for thigh room, even at size 24. - I could not get these over my thighs. Straight up. - I don't understand how they are a curvy cut at all. Maybe I got a weird pair? - Love these so far. Really thick for a dark wash. - Fit the bottom half and the waist well. - Lifespan on durability for now, haven't had the chance to wear them much. update 07/07/2019: The zipper broke on these after a few weeks... come on Madewell. I'm glad I got these on sale or I would be more upset. On sizing, sometimes I wish I had gotten a size down, because these have 4% elastane, which allows for a lot of stretch, even at the waist. If I'm buying a thicker shirt in the 20s or 30s, but if not I wish I had the 25. - Unfortunately can't remember what exact model these were. I think the Looker, and in some kind of blue colour. They didn't fit the thighs very well, and there was some waist gapping. But nice material. Don't consider this a full review since I can't remember well.
Urban Outfitters	BDG Twig High Rise	Black	Rise 11" Inseam (varies)	- Just didn't fit. Too tight in the thighs, pulling across the hips.
Silver Jeans	Avery (they have lots of curvy lines!)	Indigo	Rise 9.5" Inseam (varies)	- Looks really good, unfortunately not available in Canada to try: (- Pay attention to the fabric content, they're all over the board - A quality high-rise is rare, lots of mid-rises - Curve X is mid-rise, Sexy Curve not a nice blue (online)
	Calley	Indigo	Rise 11" (I think more like 10.5") Inseam (varies)
Joe's Jeans	Honey High Rise	Merina	Rise 10" Inseam 29"
Madewell	High Rise Curvy	Lucille	Regular inseam says 28", but is more like 29" Inseam (varies)
