						Great use of natural background sound in the auto strike and car crash stories. You transported the listener to the scene with you. In the strike story, I would have also liked to hear you run the sound under your own voice for a few seconds and have it fade out so there is less of a stark contrast between the sound of your voice in the studio and the sounds at the scene of the story. You did a good job of this in the car crash story.
						You also did a nice job of summarizing the story and choosing quotes that added context while keeping the packages

						This is a textbook example of investigative journalism. Ideastream saw a trend – ambulances were making emergency runs to a closed ER – and expanded outward through interviews and public records requests to identify where institutions: were failtering. The piece worked especially well for radio, where the reporters were able to use

The center piece kory takes up an appropriate amount of real estate and give the website a chance to
