

Who made it?	Name?	Discription?	How many?
The Crawling Mass	Fronds.	They have 8 orders with a dominate color, each unable to produce some vital chemicals and needing to get them from at least 4 other variants. The primary way to do so is through a network of underground tubes linking all the individual fronds in an area. They also use a variety of means to compete with each other, gradually allowing one to dominate and reproduce at a distance, the die back due to poisoned ground and a lack of support from other types. They evolve and differentiate so each order may have many different types of frond.	282930 Square MILES worth
Euzaruoch	N/A	rocky humanoid figures roughly 6 feet tall, with two holes in the face where eye sockets would be. these holes are filled with blue flames. They are Sapient.	5
Súly	"Way too many types of Fish"	N/A	Too many to count.
Assembly	"Nameless Servents"	identical small beings akin to Assembly, who survive by sucking a tiny amount of energy from the area around them. They are like spheres of incredibly dense dust in appearance, with a glow at the center. Anything that comes near encounters a force exerting a push away from the creatures.they have the ability to change over time, their abilities and memories diverging.	20

Who made it?	Name?	Discription?
The record	The Library	a great fortress build directly into the side of the northmost mountain. A grand staircase hewn directly into the stone traveled from the valleys up the mountain, terminating near the peak in a gigantic stone gate set into a sturdy rock wall that surrounded in a half ring the magnificent stone keep built almost at the top of the mountain. Although impressive enough as fortresses built into a remote mountainside go, the inside of the keep was the true marvel of this place. The passages of the keep sloped down and around, deep into the heart of the mountain. A massive three dimensional catacomb of tunnels, rooms and semi-natural caves the size of a large city riddled throughout the heart of the mountain.
Assembly	N/A	a sealed cave system underneath the north ocean.

Who made it?	What is it?	OTHER?
Assembly	giant humanoid statues made of icy rock, with a hollow space in their chests lined with tungsten.	three and a half Exist. One of them is only the lower Half.
Clay	Magical sentient clay that only lets people form it into what it wants.	one Exists on each continent.